Rate hike for water withdrawn

In action related to the apparent end to the statewide drought, California Water Service Co. yesterday announced it was withdrawing its request to the state for a further conservation surcharge in the Livermore district.

According to district manager Bob Tiecke, it would mean a price rollback of approximately seven percent from water bills after March 1 and cancellation of the additional 5.5 percent increase requested.

Tiecke said the cutbacks would amount to about 74 cents from an average monthly residential bill. The surcharge has been in effect since September and Tiecke added Cal Water would continue to press for water conservation and the elimination of waste.

New tentative pact may end AC strike

OAKLAND (AP) — Assemblyman Tom Bates of Oakland announced Tuesday that a "tentative settlement" was reached toward ending the the 65-day old AC Transit strike of the system's 1,850 drivers, clerks and mechannics.

Bates' report came amid accounts from both sides that it had been quietly agreed by the union and AC Transit that the words "tenative agreement" would not be used.

But management sources said a new package would be presented for ratification to the union's rank-and-file. The source said it was a tentative agreement but that language was taboo.

The strike, which started Nov. 21, left 115,000 daily riders to find other means to travel the system's 600 square miles — incuding the main commute routes between the East Bay and San Francisco.

The union's old contract expired last June 30. A key issue in the strike had been pension benefits.

Bates said he received his information of an agreement from John Wesley, president of Amalgamated Transit Union Local 192.

"There has been a tentative settlement and a recommendation to take it back to the membership" later this week, Bates said.

A few minutes later, George Adams, union recording secretary, agreed that the tentative settlement had been reached, adding that the membership would meet Thursday for a meeting to explain the accord, and members would vote Friday.

Late Tuesday afternoon, a statement from state conciliator Joseph Anderson denied there had been a tentative agreement. Any attempt to get clarification of the statement, in the face of contrary information, was flatly turned down.

A conciliation service source was enraged when he heard that leaks were occurring in Sacramento that a tentative accord was reached.

The source said the big media play given a tentative agreement announced last Friday contributed to that settlement's rejection by union membership.

It was that feeling, he said, that led to the agreement by both sides that the words "tentative agreement" should not be used.

The strike, which started Nov. 21, left 115,000 daily riders to find other means to travel the system's 600 square miles — including the main commute routes between the East Bay and San Francisco.

Following a bargaining deadlock, new talks were recommended this week at the urging of state conciliator Joseph Anderson. He recessed negotiations last Thursday.

Earlier last week, union members rejected a recommendation by their bargaining leaders that they accept a three-year pact offered by management.

Scientist hits weak nuclear safety limits

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Former Lawrence Livermore Laboratory scientist whose cry of alarm in 1969 about radiation safety made him — in his words — an "unperson" at LLL told Congress Tuesday that the safety standards he was calling for back then turned out to be too weak.

Testifying was Dr. Arthur Tamplan, who — along with LLL collegue Dr. John Goffman — became a notorious figure in the nuclear community upon publication of their report indicating, among other things, that nuclear tests in Nevada had exposed residents of Nevada, Utah and Colorado to cancer-causing levels of radiation.

Tamplan, now with a scientific lobbying group in Washington, talked Tuesday in terms of a "doubling dose," which is the amount of radiation exposure which doubles the chances of getting cancer.

He said in 1969 he and Goffman were saying that 50 units (known as rads) was a doubling dose. That conclusion, he said, led to a study by the National Academy of Sciences, which concluded in 1972 that a doubling dose is 200 rads.

But now, Tamplan said, studies are coming out which conclude that a doubling dose is only 10 rads.

The official U.S. maximum allowable dose — arrived at in 1956 — is 5-rads-per-year. Tamplan and other witnesses said that figure is often surpassed at nuclear power plants. Tamplan said a worker at a nuclear plant "could get 12 rads in one year."

Tamplan said his group, the National Resources Defense Council, had petitioned two U.S. agencies to lower the standards to one-half rad-per-year.

However, the witnesses — especially Dr. Karl Morgan, a 30-year employe at Oak Ridge National Laboratory and long a critic of government practices, implied that safety precautions are much more effective at nationally laboratories than at nuclear power sites.

Said Morgan, "five rads per year may be acceptable because (at some sites) only 1 or 2 percent of the employes are ever exposed to that much. But in the nuclear industry as many as half get that much. Then

Driver killed

DUBLIN — A 25-year-old Castro Valley man was killed Monday night when his vehicle went out of control on Old Dublin Road and flipped over before coming to rest against a tree, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Timothy Paul Antone of 20928 Chester St. was pronounced dead on arrival at Valley Memorial Hospital in Livermore.

According to a CHP spokesman, the vehicle was eastbound apparently traveling at a high rate of speed when it went out of control around a curve and rolled. about 8:30 p.m.

'Input' night proves loser for schools

PLEASANTON — Supposing the local school districts schedule a "community input" night on the question of hiring a new superintendent and nobody bothered to show up?

Then you'd have what occurred last night at Harvest Park School when nary a resident of the Amador or Pleasanton school districts bothered to drop by.

The 200 chairs set up for the occasion were untouched, save for the stunned bodies of some 15 district trustees, administrators and news media representatives.

The "input" meeting was to be the second of six to hear what district residents and employes wanted in a superintendent.

Trustees will try again Thursday with any and all residents of the districts invited to come out and express their views on "what a good superintendent should have."

The meeting is scheduled for the Foothill High school library at 8 p.m.

The third and final community meet is Tuesday, January 31, also at 8 o'clock, at the Dublin High school library.

Will drop legal action

Disqualified candidate stumped

PLEASANTON — You can't buck the system without an attorney, says Thomas Michael Minahan, a 26-year-old carpenter who was disqualified from the city council race because two of the signatures on his nomination papers weren't from voters registered in the city.

Minahan tried to file suit against the city last week, seeking to get his name back on the March 7 ballot. Filing "pro per" without the advice or cost of a lawyer, he was stumped when Alameda County Superior Court Judge M.O. Sabraw wouldn't sign a summons because the papers were "defective."

The political science graduate tried to get Sabraw's clerk, Shirley Wensler, to explain how his court papers were defective, but she said she couldn't give him legal advice. She did, however, advise him to hire an attorney or go to the county legal aide department.

Not wishing to pay an attorney, Minahan went to the legal aide department Friday, only to find the department doesn't take on political cases.

According to court clerk Wensler, it's not the judge's place to tell Minahan what's wrong with the papers. Wensler said Judge Sabraw indicated that Minahan probably wouldn't understand the legal terminology being a layman.

Minahan, who sees the situation as a violation of his rights, told the Times he will probably drop suit plans, noting that he can't "fix" his papers unless he knows why they are "defective."

Wensler said Minahan could always research proper format in the law libraries, but Minahan claimed he copied such format when originally writing civil action papers.

Clergy mulls gay members

The United Presbyterian Church was thrown into the forefront of the battle over ordination of acknowledged homosexuals after a committee report recommended that they be accepted.

A majority of 14 members of a 19-member task force committee appointed by the church's top governing unit, the general assembly, made the recommendation to the assembly Monday. For details, see page 2.

Big Ben in soccer biz

Ben Davidson of Pleasanton, a former Oakland Raider defensive end, was named as a minority stockholder of the Oakland Stompers, professional soccer team, yesterday at Trader Vic's in Emeryville.

Other owners included ex-San Francisco 49er quarterback John Brodie and rock concert promoter Billy Graham. See details in Sports, Page 14.

Candidate sees shakeup

Livermore City Council candidate Bob Weissel calls for a shake up in the city administration, starting with the replacement of Public Works Director Dan Lee and City Manager Bill Parness. Weissel, who works for the city, sees the basic problem of the local government as having the same people in key positions for too long. "It's time for a change," he declares in his campaign talks. Weissel gives his outspoken comments in the continuing candidate's profile series being run daily.

LLL team at satellite burn site

Several Lawrence Livermore Laboratory scientists and technicians were flown to Canada yesterday as part of a U.S. team of experts sent to study the site where a nuclear-powered Russian spy satellite fell from its orbit.

Remnants of the satellite glowed brightly as they streaked across the sky and into the remote region - 60 miles east of Yellowknife about 850 miles north of the American border at 3:53 a.m. PST.

The satellite was powered by a nuclear reactor and carried 100 pounds of highly - radioactive uranium 235. Both Russian and U.S. officials believe the uranium burned up in the atmosphere and posed no threat of radioactive contamination.

Gay minister issue stirs sensitive waves

The recommendation to ordain avowed homosexuals as Presbyterian ministers has stirred up a nationwide controversy among that church's pastors and members.

A majority of 14 members of a 19-member task force committee made the recommendation Monday.

The committee was appointed by the United Presbyterian Church General Assembly, which heads the church's governing hierarchy.

The General Assembly will decide on the recommendation in May in San Diego.

Local pastors agreed the issue was "extremely sensitive."

The Rev. William E. Nebo said it was his understanding, however, that if the assembly accepts the recommendation, it would allow each Presbytery to "individually decide the ordination or non-ordination of anyone avowing homosexual orientation." He is pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Livermore.

Presbyterys are local church governing units, he explained.

"A presbytery is made up of all ministers of a given area, one elder per minister from each church and then a number of elders at large to equal the number of ministers not assigned to a church," Nebo continued.

The congregation ordains elders, he added.

He said he had told his congregation about the issue but "they had not said much about it."

"I think its a good idea for anybody who espouses Christianity to not make cavalier statements about homosexuals. It is not a Christian occupation to oppress people."

Task force committee members agreed 100 per cent that the church must extricate itself from activity that oppresses homosexuals, Nebo explained.

"We will study, think and pray about the issue while we await some action on the part of the assembly. Our adult education class will begin studying the issue six weeks before the assembly meets in May," Nebo reported.

The Rev. Robert Vogt, pastor of the Presbyterian Community Church in Pleasanton, agreed this was one of the most sensitive issues to arise in the church's history.

He added that out of his congregation numbering over 800, he had heard only two or three strong protests against the possibility of ordaining a homosexual minister.

"Our main concern is with sensitivity to people's pain and distress and at the same time maintaining the standards of what it means to be an effective pastor of a congregation," Vogt added.

Historically, the final decision belongs to the local church and should remain there, Vogt continued.

A recent opinion poll among Presbyterian churches nationwide resulted in 71 per cent of members and 68 per cent of pastors declaring they would consider it improper to ordain a homosexual.

Also, 80 per cent of members and 73 per cent of pastors indicated they would not acceptacpae homosexual pastor.

The issue was spurred to a showdown in various denominations recently when homosexuals made an open declaration against discrimination in society in general as well as in church life.mgA majority of 14 of the 19-member task force asked the church to adopt a policy that a homosexual may be ordained "if the person manifests such gifts as are required for ordination."

A five member minority report asked the church to declare that "our present understanding of God's will for His people precludes the ordination of avowed, practicing homosexuals."

The task force, chaired by Virginia Davidson, A Rochester N.Y. lay woman, includes Biblical scholars, theologians and specialists in counseling, medicine and the social sciences.

The issue grew out of a query posed by the New York City presbytery. They asked for a church ruling in 1976.

The assembly agreed to set up a special task force to "provide more light on the question."

In recent times, two acknowledged homosexuals have been ordained in U.S. churches. In both cases, local church units made the decision without approval of the denominations as a whole.

No Murray candidates yet

Prospective applicants for the vacated seat on the Murray School District board aren't exactly beating down the door of district headquarters!

In fact, with five days to go before deadline for resumes, the district has yet to receive a single one.

While "interest has been evidenced by several persons," according to a district spokesperson, none of the requested one-page resumes have turned up — but at least one may be on the way.

That would be from Harry Molz, a Dublin area realtor, who fell short in his bid at the last general election when Donald Biddle was elected and Linda Jeffery reelected.

Molz told The Times he was strongly considering applying for the position vacated by Bob Foster. The latter was forced to resign because of his appointment as store director for a new Mervyn's in Corona, Riverside County. Foster, who had served for almost three years, resigned effective Jan. 16.

One other candidate in the last election, David Foster, has definetly ruled himself out.

A third, Linda Cooley, said she would submit a resume in the next few days. The deadline is 10 a.m., Monday, Jan. 30.

The Murray school board will hold a candidates night for those turning in applications on the evening of the 30th. The board will then interview candidates following their regular board meeting on Monday, Feb. 6 — at approximately 9 p.m.

An appointment will be made on or before Feb. 14. The board actually has until that date to make an appointment, or the county may arbitrarily appoint.

The person selected cannot act on board matters for 30 days after an appointment, allowing time for the public to petition for an election.

Foster's unexpired term runs through March of 1979.

Residents of the Murray School District wishing to apply should send a one-page resume to Peter W. Snyder, board president, Murray School District, 7416 Brighton Dr., Dublin 94566. An additional one-page statement on education is optional.

Report places county center in Pleasanton

OAKLAND — Pleasanton beat Livermore and Dublin in the competition for the East County Government Center, at least in the eyes of Alameda County's architectural consultants.

Supervisors accepted the consultants' report yesterday and set a public hearing for 11 a.m. March 14 so that officials of all Valley communities and anyone else can make final anyone else can make the final public input before supervisors vote on the matter.

Ratcliff, Slama and Cadwalader of Oakland also recommended that the pre-trial jail that will be associated with the government center's courts be located at Santa Rita instead of at the center.

Placing the jail in the court building, which would be near one of Pleasanton's motel, restaurant and commercial centers, "could have a depressing effect on the people of that community," said the consultants.

The government center should contain the courts, sheriff's patrol, farm and home advisor, and communications and public works department, said the report.

Health and welfare facilities will serve people better if they are located in the hearts of all three communities, rather than also being housed in the government center, the consultants remarked.

The Oakland firm viewed six Valley sites and rated them on a scale of 16 points among various categories including location, access, ease of development, surrounding environment, earthquake fault problems, physical aspects, and availability of utilities.

The Hopyard Road site was the leader on the point scale with 14, followed by Santa Rita with 12, Livermore Civic Center 11, downtown Livermore (near municipal court) 10, Livermore Airport 9, and Dublin (Dublin Boulevard and San Ramon Road) 8.

The Dublin site was rated average in most categories and lost badly in the earthquake department because it is near the active Calaveras Fault, last rocked by a quake in 1861.

The Hopyard Road site got high marks in nearly every column except surrounding environment and general comments where it was rated "average."

President Carter and Prime Minister Trudeau were discussing the matter by telephone within minutes of its sighting.

U.S. government authorities said the satellite, launched into orbit in September, was used to keep track of U.S. Navy ships and submarines through radar powered by the reactor.

An LLL spokesman said at least a half-dozen Lab employes and personnel from EG&G, a San Ramon electronics and high-technology firm engaged in government contract work, were among experts flown to the site at the request of the Canadian government.

you should lower the maximum permitted dose."

The hearing Tuesday was the first in what promises to be a months-long investigation into the long-term effects of low level radiations. The investigation was prompted by charges about nuclear explosion test sites but has been broadened to cover consumer issues — such as micro-wave ovens — and medical practices, especially X-rays.

Witnesses Tamplan and Morgan agreed that the increasing presence of radiation in the U.S. is a big part of the explanation for the increasing prevalence of cancer.

Tamplan said his study of the 1963-1965 period of Nevada tests showed that in St. George, Utah, children — who are especially susceptible to thyroid cancer — averaged 120 rads. He said most of the people in three states "probably received a double dose."

Prompted by Rep. Richard Ottinger (D-New York) to tell what happened to him when he came out with his 1969 report, Tamplan responded (with a few parts removed for length):

"We had been critical internally, but (because that didn't work) in 1969 we went public with a report at a scientific conference in San Francisco.

"I can literally say that after that, all hell broke lose. (I was a group leader.) My group was cut from 13 to 2, then the other one was hired.

"There were efforts on the part of the Lab to censor my report. When I went to the other meetings, I had to pay my own way. They even docked me vacation time for one Saturday and Sunday (at a conference).

"The Lab was very nervous about taking the next step (and) firing Goffman and I (because of the publicity).

"Goffman had a $250,000 a year program on cancer research. That was cut off, and he left.

"I stayed on as essentially an unperson. I had no work, no responsibilities. I just went to my office and picked up my paychecks.

"I stayed because I thought it was necessary in the AEC (the old Atomic Energy Commission). When the AEC was abolished (in 1975) there was rejoicing in the streets among my friends.

"I decided I would leave rather than stay on as an embarrassment to the new peopleat ERDA (the Energy Research and Developement Administration).

"But now I see on the Mancuso report the same old thing is going on. It (the abolition of the AEC) was just a case of bureaucRatic musical chairs. The Same people are still running things."

In the last paragraph, Tamplan was referring to an allegedly surpressed URDA report on the incidence of cancer among workers at U.S. nuclear research sites. That issue will be considered in future hearings, which will include testimony from the report's author.

Still time for that recipe

Are you listed among The Four Hundred?

You are if you filed your "Favorite Recipe" for consideration among the 400 or more entries that have been flooding this newspaper's offices over the past two weeks.

Some of those entrants tell us "I'm in it for a share of the $300in prizes." Others assure us "it's just for the glory." But all, it seems certain, will share in the fun of this most popular of Valley contests.

The rules are simple: Send us the complete detail, with cooking instructions, of a recipe that is your favorite. It need not be a dish which you originated, although originality is one consideration in the judges' final decision.

There are eight categories (listed in an ad in today's Times) including a new one for Microwave Magic.

Entries must be mailed by midnight Thursday, Jan. 26, to: The Times Favorite Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 607, Pleasanton 94566; or leave your entries at our Livermore office (1916 First St.) or our Pleasanton office (126 Spring St.) by 5:30 p.m. that day.

All winners and a number of other interesting recipes will be published in Favorite Recipe Section, appearing with your Times of Feb. 16.

One huge fault?

PLEASANTON — A potentially - active earthquake fault thought to run between Santa Rita Jail and Hopyard Road in a north-south direction might actually be part of a single fault that caused a partial shutdown of operations at the Vallecites Nuclear Center.

Michael Hansen, a geologist with Judd Hull and Associates of Hayward, told a Chamber of Commerce meeting yesterday that his studies into an addition for the civic center showed the Pleasanton fault may be 500 feet or more west of its supposed location.

The Calaveras fault is thought to run parallel to the Pleasanton fissure along the ridge. The Verona fault, thought to split off the Calaveras fault in a south-east direction, caused the closure of VNC when geologist Darrel Herd mapped it within 200 feet of a nuclear reactor there.

Hansen theorized that the three faults might actually be only one that has been incorrectly mapped. No one has actually claimed to find the Pleasanton fault where it has been mapped, he said.

He decided to stay out of the current controversy whether the Verona fault comes within 200 feet of the nuclear center. "I don't know if it does or not," he simply said.

But he feels the location of the fault is not important when discussing potential damage. "It doesn't make a tremendous amount of difference whether you're 100 feet off the fault or 1000 feet off the fault," he said.

The type of subsoil, structure, and foundation — coupled with the amount of ground motion induced by a quake — are more important factors, the Livermore resident said.

Wood-frame houses generally withstand ground movements well, he said, flexing with the shaking. Older, unreinforced masonry structures are more likely to be damaged in an earthquake.

Side effects of earthquakes are also more likely to cause damage than the actual quake. Broken gas mains can lead to an accumulation of natural gas and cause an explosion.

Hansen said earthquake experts expect a major tremor on the San Andreas fault due to increasing pressure between the Pacific and North American subsurface plates as they grind against one another.

People need not worry about the next big quake, Hansen reassured his audience, because earthquake prediction is an unproven art and no one knows when the next big one will strike.

Siren test here Friday

Alameda County sirens will sound off at 11 a.m. Friday during the Office of Emergency Services' quarterly test of its disaster warning devices in conjunction with neighboring San Mateo and Santa Clara counties.

During the test, sirens will emit a stead one-minute blast followed by one minute of silen and will conclude with a one-minute rise and fall w

During an actual emergency, the sir s would sound for three to five minutes. A steady blast would denote a peacetime emergency while wavering or short intermittent alarms would warn of an immediate attack.

The warning devices are inspected and tested daily at noon except Sunday with a 20-second blast. If the sirens sound for three to five minutes at times other than the quarterly or noon-time tests, citizens should listen to their local radio or television stations for official information concerning the emergency.

Ecology fair planned

Planning for the Ecology Fair will be the major topic of the upcoming board meeting of the Valley Ecology Center tonight at 8 's at the Hannon household, 309 Pearl Drive, Livermore.

The fair is an annual event organized by the Ecology Center to promoted citizen awareness of environmental and ecological problems. The Ecology Fair will be held in the spring at the Barn. For more information call 443-5588.

Volleyball league forming

DUBLIN — An organizational meeting will be held Jan. 25 at 7 in the Shannon Community Center to discuss setting up a co-ed volleyball league .

The program, scheduled to begin mid-February, is designed for friends and neighbors who wish to participate at a non-competitive level. A league fee of $30 per team will be charged for officials costs and awards.

The Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) Recreation Department is sponsoring the league.

United States Volleyball Association rules will be in effect except for:

"The number of female players shall equal or exceed the number of males. Positions will alternate female-male."

For further information call 828-7711.

Aerobic dancing starts

DUBLIN — The Dublin San Ramon Services District in conjunction with Aerobic Dancing by Jackie Sorensen will be starting a five week session Feb. 13.

Registrations are being taken at Shannon Community Center, 11600 Shannon Ave., Dublin from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The cost for the 10-lesson session is $25. The class will be held Monday and Wednesday from 1 to 2 p.m. at Shannon Center.

Aerobics is a system of cardiovascular conditioning which strengthens the heart and lungs by forcing the body to demand increased amounts of axygen over a long period of time.

Aerobic dance involves a series of vigorous dances, set to popular songs. The dance movements are combined with running and jumping. A routine may include leg kicks, lunges, arm swings and jogging.

Ski trips set

DUBLIN — One day ski trips for teens and adults are being sponsored by the Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) Recreation Department.

Registrations are being taken at Shannon Community Center from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday or by mail one week prior to each trip. The bus fee must be paid at registration time.

The one day trips are as follows:

Jan. 28, Sugar Bowl, bus fee $12, lift ticket, $11.

Feb. 13, Kirkwood, bus $13, lift $11.50.

March 11, Squaw Valley, bus $13, lift ticket, $12.

The ski bus departs Shannon Park Community Center, 11600 Shannon Ave. each ski trip morning at 5:30 a.m. and returns approximately 7:30 p.m.

Bring a dry change of clothes, sack lunch and money for the lift ticket.

Beginning ski lessons are available on the slopes for additional costs for those wishing to enroll.

He demands shakeup in city hall

LIVERMORE — Robert "Bob" Weissel is one council candidate who states emphatically that "it's time for a change."

"The city has been run by Bill Parness and Dan Lee for far too long," says the city employee who is an engineering technician. "The crux of the problem is this: you're in the city fifteen, eighteen or twenty years and you set policies and they might be very good policies at the time they were set. You're reluctant to review these policies because they're your policies and a new man from a new era could come in and recommend changes ."

Working within the city, Weissel sees many areas where he disagrees with city policy. The bus system has been talked about for the last two years, he says, and engineering department knew of available funds for the busline. "We could have had a bus line two-three years ago, if Mr. Parness had recommended it. It's in the records that he's against it," says the outspoken candidate.

On the city attorney: "One of the reasons I think Gary Reiners should go is inexperience. The kind of money we're paying the city attorney I think we could use an experienced attorney," he says.

On Dan Lee: "The voters voted down the (First Street) overpass. Dan Lee wanted the overpass. We got the overpass. It's going to reroute for no particular good reason except get the people up over the tracks a little faster and it's going to cut out a heck of a lot of businesses."He adds, "I'm not so sure we needed an overpass. It was, in the long run and that's what Dan Lee is looking at, 20-30 years down the line-in our best interest."

On mini-parks: "That has been Lee's pet project for 15 years, putting in little mini-parks which are very pretty but very costly to maintain. Money has always been diverted to the mini-park funds so we can't spend it on park funds. I think the city is spending too much money developing mini-parks. Most of them are in areas that can't be utilized by the people,like the Totem Pole Park or the little rose garden called Hansen Park."

On the parking problem: "We have a parking mess in the city. I don't think anything concrete has been done about it. I was in the traffic engineering department for two and a half years, I did more studies than one can believe. I don't know what the heck they did with all our studies."

On bikeways: "We have bikeways all over town. They go nowhere. They just deadend. A really good example is Railroad Avenue. I drew the preliminary sketch for what was wanted on Railroad Avenue. You have these beautiful 13-foot bikepaths, beautiful, aren't they? Where do they go? Noplace. There are no houses on either end. You get to them by crossing Murietta Boulevard or come down P Street or First Street."

Weissel says city crews often are used to do projects that he feels should be given to outside contracts, such as some of the work at the Springtown Golf Course. "That's the way the finance department looks at it. When I talked to Ron Peterson about it to see if such a thing can be done, he said 'Oh, sure,'" the candidate explains. "That doesn't seem right to me. It just seems like to me you're not letting the council, the people's representatives, know what's going on It's that type of thing I would like to change."

He adds, "It's not cheating, they're using people to their best advantage, but I just don't know. We're putting in a pipeline out there at the new civic center. Why didn't that go out for bid? Why did we get CETA employes to put that thing out? I'd ask a lot of questions. I'd ask about how the money is being shuffled around and where it's being hidden."

Council candidate

He says regular city work, like striping the streets, has to be done in less amount of time because the rest of the time the crews may be working on mini-parks or some other project. "And they're not paying these people any more," he says. "I feel morale is low in all departments."

Weissel repeatedly expresses his frustration, and says that is one of the reasons he is running.

A city employee for the last three and a half years, Weissel says he probably will lose his job after the election whether or not he wins. He will be going back into the construction business for himself and he already has a handyman business on the side. The father of a two-year-old daughter, he and his family have lived in Livermore for five years. He previously worked for Kaiser Engineering.

"It's not the working people that I'm after. The department heads, Dan Lee and Bill Parness, have got to go," he reiterates emphatically. — by Connie Rux

He's through with PG&E, not Livermore

Cy Beebe

Cecil A. (Cy) Beebe can remember when less than 2,000 people — mostly farmers — lived in Livermore and its main street consisted ofrows of grain and feed outlets, storage warehouses and a large flour mill.

The town even had three hotels. And everyone knew everyone else.

That was back in 1922, when Beebe, at age 7, first arrived in Livermore from Guerneville, his birthplace. Today Beebe has retired as manager of Pacific Gas and Electric Company's operations in the Livermore, Pleasanton, Sunol, Dublin-San Ramon areas after 37 years of utility service.

Now 62, Beebe says Livermore will remain his home. The city councilman and his wife, the former Evelyn Hanses, a third-generation Member of a prominent Livermore pioneer family, will continue to live in their present home and tedn to the cattle and grain on their 330-acre ranch just out side the city.

Except for a three-year period in Antioch, where he served as PG&E manager from 1956 to 1959, Beebe has called Livermore home for the past 52 years.

Since those early days when Livermore was primarily a farming and grain feed outlet, Beebe has been in the forefront of its tremendous growth. During the boom years when Livermore was transfromed from a sleepy, quiet cow town into a major surburban community, Beebe and his PG&E workers kept pace with the growing energy demands of local farmers, businessmen and homeowners.

Today, nearly 100,000 people lice in the Tri-Valley area, many of whom commute to work in the cities. Farming is now a minor part of the local industry, except for the wine and vineyard operations. And there isn't even a hotel left in the city.

When Beebe first took over as PG&E's Livermore manager in 1953, he inherited an office force of three people and about 6,000 customers. Today, 130 PG&E employees serve the gas and electric needs of 40,000 cusomers.

"I suppose it's the satifaction of providing a necessary service to people that appeals to me," he said. "I've felt that satisfaction as the local PG&E representative and as a city councilman."

Beebe served on the Livermore City Council from 1970 to 1974. He is a past commander of American Legion Post 47, a past president ofthe Livermore Chamber of Commerce, member of the Livermore Lions Club, member of the Livermore Industrial Committee, and past president of the Community Chest, now known as United Way.

Beebe joined PG&E in February, 1941, in the Hayward gas department. After serving in the Navy for three-years during World WarII, Beebe returned to PG&E in 1946, serving in the sales and commercial departments, steam-electric department and in the warehouse stores department before his managerial appointment in 1953.

But don't be surprised if Cy Beebe's name crops up occasionally on a service type committee. "I guess I'll always enjoy helping people," he smiled.

There's no free court —county

OKAKLAND — Moot court is not a moot point with Supervisor Valerie Raymond.

Boalt Hall, the University of California's law school, has asked the county for permission to use the Berkeley-Albany municipal courtrooms for 13 sessions as practice for law students who need to get the feel of a real courtroom in arguing cases. Such a practice session is called "moot court" because the cases are not real.

Raymond balked at the cost to the county — $941 for the 13 sessions, including $573 for one deputy sheriff for security and $368 for utilities.

Supervisor Joseph Bort agreed that the county could set a precedent with so many "free rides" for a law school. What if Santa Clara and Golden Gate law schools, to name but two, also asked the same favor, said Bort.

Dogs, cars at fair soon

A California Collie Fanciers dog show and Bay Area Horseless Carriage Club's auto swap highlight a light Fairgrounds schedule for the month of February.

The Collie Fanciers will arrive in trailers on Saturday, Feb. 11 with the show slated for Feb. 12.

The auto swap, always one of the highlights of the Fairgrounds' winter schedule, will be held Sunday, Feb. 26.

Also on the docket are several autocrosses, dinner dances, the Foothill High School senior breakfast Tuesday, Feb. 14, and three crab feeds!

Voice of the Valley has a CB Break-dance set Saturday, Feb. 4, the Future Farmers of America will hold a fund-raising dance Feb. 18, the Mountain House School parents a dinner dance Feb. 25 and Cub Scout Pack 911 a Blue/Gold Dinner Feb. 28.

The crab feeds are planned by Pleasanton Lions Club (Feb. 4), Sequoia Lodge 349 (Feb. 11), and Alisal Lodge (Feb. 18).

The autocrosses are slated by MG Owners Club (Feb. 5), Porsche Club (Feb. 11), Sports Car Club of America (Feb. 12).

Some kind words for the demise of COVA

DUBLIN — Despite plans to disband, the Congress of Valley Agencies (COVA), fulfilled its intended function of getting elected Valley officials together to discuss mutual issues, according to COVA Chairperson Lila Euler.

COVA will consider adopting a resolution to disband Jan. 26 since COVA members determined the Valley's best interests are no longer served by their agency.

The agency was formed in 1974.

"I have mixed feelings about COVA's disbandment," Euler said. "On one hand I hate to see an agency formed for idealistic and altruistic purposes end. On the other hand, there is something positive about an agency being able to fold, close its doors and its members go on to other business."

She said she thought the concept of COVA was "good" and officials will find other ways to communicate regarding Valley problems.

She added that it was unrealistic to think any agency could solve all problems.

Holding seminars on transportation and air quality were two COVA highlights, Euler reported.

The seminars made people aware of the problems inherent in the two subjects. COVA played an instructive, educational role in regard to these two areas, she added.

Disbandment will be subject to ratification by the governing bodies of the respective members.

COVA's membership is comprised of the cities of Livermore and Pleasanton plus the Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) and the Alameda County Flood Control and Water Conservation District (Zone 7).

Symphony soloists Adrienne Inglis and Greg Pierce.

Local symphony spotlights youth

The Livermore-Amador Symphony will present its Young People's Concert Sunday, Jan. 29. The free concert will be performed at 3 p.m. at California High School in San Ramon, and again at 7:30 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church in Livermore.

The concert will feature two Livermore High School students, Adrienne Inglis and Greg Pierce, winners of the symphony's youth concerto contest.

As a special treat for youngsters the 50-person orchestra will present The Story of Babar the Elephant complete with narration from Guy Corynen.

The one hour program is without intermission and should present opportunity for a family introduction the symphony," said Virginia McFann, president of the Symphony Association.

"A live performance is a special experience," added McFann. Danse Macabre by Saint-Saens will also be included in the program.

Pierce, a junior at Livermore High School, will solo on tenor saxophone with the symphony. His selection will be Premiere Rhapsody by Claude Debussy. Inglis will play the flute in a piece by Frank Martin titled, "Ballade.

Valley students due in Oakland performance

Chris Bystroff, Andreas Kalb and Brad Lowen are Valley students performing in the Oakland Symphony Youth Orchestra's Winter Concert Friday, Jan. 27 at 8 p.m. in the Paramount Theatre.

Tickets for the concert, priced at $1 for students and $2 for adults are available at the Paramount Theater box office. Harold Farberman and Dr. Denis de Costeau will share conducting duties.

The third in a four-part series on Antiques and Collectables will be presented by George Fong on oriental antiques Tuesday, Jan. 31 from 7 to 10 p.m. at Harvest Park School, 4900 Valley Ave., Pleasanton. The lecture is free.

Civic Arts Theatre in Walnut Creek will host the San Francisco Mime Troupe Wednesday, Jan. 25 at 8:30 p.m. Admission is $3.50.

The troupe will perform "The Hotel Universe," an original mini musical recounting the struggle of white, black and Mexican tenants against eviction from their seedy but beloved hotel.

The 25th Annual Junior Bach Festival will be held at James Moore Theater at the Oakland Museum Friday, Jan. 27 at 8 p.m.

The Pleasanton Cultural Arts Council will hold its second annual Greek Night Saturday, Feb. 25 at the Veterans Hall, 301 Main St., Pleasanton. Tickets, $7.50 for entertainment and dinner, can be obtained at Pleasanton Bakery on Main Street or by calling 846-4808 or 462-4520.

Pianist Radu Lupu, hailed by some as among the top pianists of his generation, will join Edo de Waart and the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra for performances at the Opera House and Flint Center in Cupertino. Opera House performances are scheduled for Wednesday and Friday, Jan. 25 and 27 at 8:30 p.m. and Jan. 26 at 2 p.m. The Flint Center will host the symphony Saturday, Jan. 28 at 8 p.m.

Painting by Pietro Annigoni are on display at State Savings and Loan, 999 E. Stanley Blvd. The showing is sponsored by the Livermore Art Association. Annigoni's mother was from Livermore.

Bryant fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singer Anita Bryant says she is forming a watchdog committee to identify television programs that feature sex and violence and depict homosexuality as an alternative lifestyle.

She announced the campaign Sunday at the National Religious Broadcasters Association convention. Outside the convention hotel, hundreds of homosexuals marched in a candlelight vigil and demanded that Miss Bryant leave town.

The "Bugs Bunny Follies," a stage review in the mode of "You're a Good Man, Charley Brown," premieres at the San Jose Center for the Performing Arts next Tuesday. The two-hour show, a presentation of Rodger Hess Productions, is a mixture of singing, dancing, comedy and a tremendous amount of audience participation. Through the use of highly-sophisticated rear screen projection, large cartoon-type color visuals set the changing scenes for this stage show.

Opening night curtain Tuesday is 7:30 with performances Wednesday and Thursday at 4 p.m. and 7:30.

The production then moves to the Paramount Theatre in Oakland for performances Feb. 3, 4 and 5. It will play the Masonic Auditorium Feb. 6, 7 and 8.

Tickets are on sale at all major outlets.

Those who make periodic trips into San Francisco for a Civic Light Opera or ACT production no doubt are aware of the fantastic popularity of the former's revival of "Dolly" with Carol Channing starring.

Chances are the demand for tickets will be no less hectic when the award-winning "Annie" comes to the Curran stage in June.

This is the production that young Jill Whelan of Livermore has earned a part in.

Just a note, then, to remind all Valley theatre aficionados that if you haven't got season tickets, be prepared to stand in line if you wait 'till the last few weeks before the play bows June 12.

Shiva

Using the world's most powerful laser in the quest for energy

Sometime in the next few months there will be a nuclear reaction in the Valley triggered by more power than all U.S. electrical power plants are capable of producing.

It will create temperatures and densities to rival those on the sun, and only a handful of persons here will even know it has happened.

Those will be the persons at Lawrence Livermore Laboratory involved in firing the Shiva laser, the world's most powerful laser, for the first time at a target containing fusion fuel.

The Shiva laser system is almost as long as a football field and over two stories high. It cost the Department of Energy $25 million to build.

LLL is experimenting with laser fusion to test the feasibility of its use in commerical power plants, as well as for military application, according to Mark Summers a technical assistant on the project.

The entire fusion reaction meshing two hydrogen atoms into a single atom of helium will take less than one billionth of a second, said Summers.

"There is no blast effect, " said Summers. He said that the reaction scheduled for March basically differs from a hydrogen bomb in the amount of fuel use. "There is not enough fuel or trigger energy to explode" like a bomb, he said.

The fuel in the target is made of heavy hydrogen isotopes, deuterium and tritium, and is about the size of a grain of salt, Summers said.

Actually, there will be more energy expended in exploding the target, than will be released in the explosion. "The energy released from the target is close to that released from a large fire cracker without the noise," Summers explained.

It won't be until sometime in the 1980s with an even more powerful laser, Shiva Nova, that the light energy put into the reaction will equal the energy released. "Right now we're fighting a losing battle," said Summers.

It's longer than a football field, and cost $25 million

The possibility of using lasers to fuse atoms together to create power to run power plants is a considerable Time in the future. Summers said there must be "a one-million fold improvement in target gain efficiency," the amount of energy released from the target, before considering a prototype fusion power plant. The Lab expects that to be in the early 1990s.

The name Shiva is derived from a multi-armed deity in the Hindu religion known as the Destroyer and the Creator.

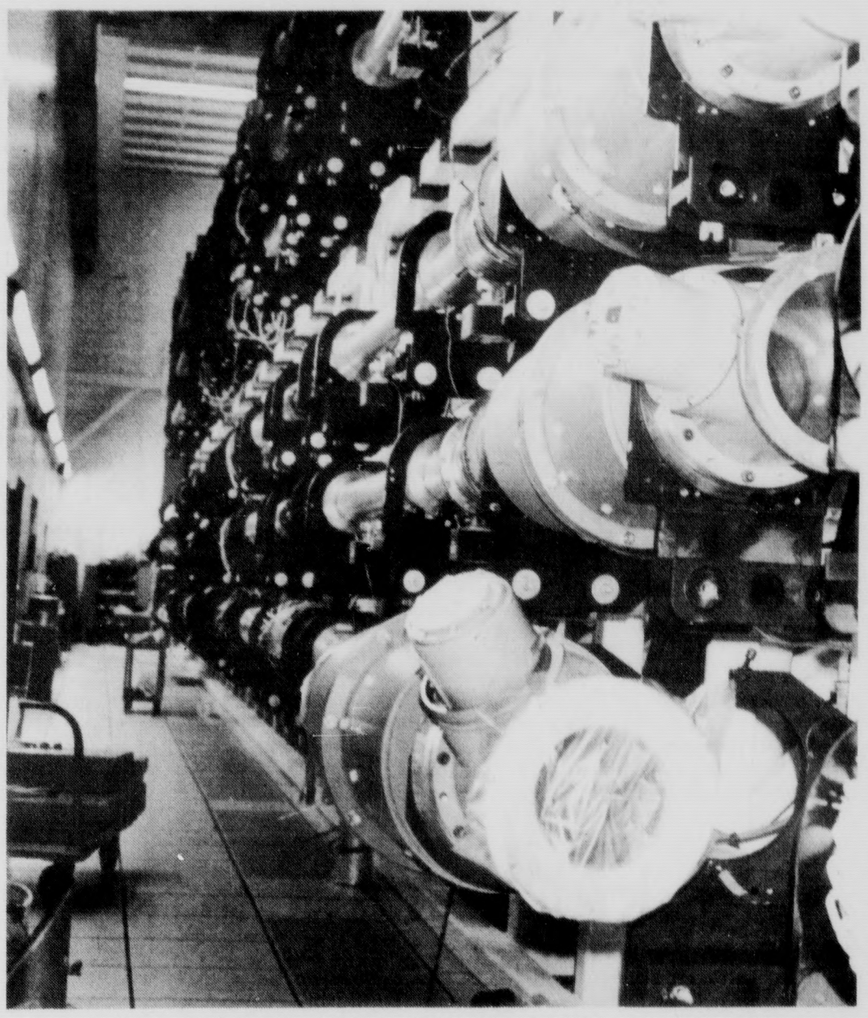
To create the reaction, electrical energy is stored in capacitor banks beneath the laser. A laser then changes the electricity into light which is divided into each of the 20 small lasers making up Shiva.

Each laser arm amplifies the light pulse, a plate-like disc of light 12 inches in diameter and a little over one inch long. The light is sent hurling through a series of amplifiers at the speed of light, 186,000 miles per second. When the light reaches the end, the 20 laser beams are aimed by mirrors into a lens.

The lens condenses and pin-points the laser light onto the target. At that moment, the brilliance from the lasers on the tiny fusion target will be 10 times the brilliance the sun casts over an area the size of Los Angeles at noon in the summer, according to Summers.

The powerful laser beams compress the fuel in the target to densities and temperatures high enough for thermonuclear reaction to take place.

The temperature at the moment the fuel ignites itself is about 100,000,000 C., the heat of the interior of the sun.



Twenty laser arms like these make Shiva the world's most powerful laser.

The kind of thermonuclear fusion reaction that the Lab expects to take place with Shiva is the kind of reaction that produces energy in the sun and stars.

Although the heat will reach temperatures found on the sun, it will not melt down the laser complex, said Summers, because the heat will occur in such a tiny amount for such a short time.

He compared the situation with a match versus a bonfire. Summers said that the temperature of a burning match is the same as the bonfire, but because of the size of the fire, it creates more energy than the match.

Summers said the key to the power released by the lasers is the tremendous amount of compression of the energy in time and space.

It takes about three minutes to deliver enough electrical power to charge the capacitors. That same energy is poured into the laser in less than a millionth of a second. When the energy is delivered onto the target in less than one billionth of a second, the compression of the energy in time is similar to squeezing the distance from the earth to the moon into one inch, said Summers.

The lens condenses the laser light in much the same way a magnifying glass can condense light from the sun, said Summers. He added that because of the nature of laser light, it can be condensed to a much greater degree than most light.

Although Shiva is not even the half-way mark toward commerical uses of fusion power, it is one of the many steps in proving the feasibility of what could ultimately mean a safe, clean and inexhaustible source of energy, according to the Lab.

After Shiva shows that a significant amount of target fuel will ignite itself, Shiva Nova will take over the laser experiments. Nova will have 40 laser arms and is expected to produce 10 to 15 times the power and 20 to 30 times the energy of Shiva. It will cost $195 million dollars.

With the success of Nova, the Lab sees the theory of commerically feasible fusion reactors turning into a reality.

For a tiny moment, this target chamber will hold temperatures and densities found on the sun and in stars.

'Person to Person' seminar set

Chabot College-Valley Campus will host a one-day symposium on relationships entitled, "Person-to-Person in Love and Work," for men and women Saturday, Feb. 4 at Dublin High School Auditorium.

The morning session will explore ways to make personal relationships better, and will consider both love and friendship. The afternoon session will deal with the challenge of building relationships on the job which contribute to personal and organizational growth.

The symposium was designed by two Valley Campus faculty members, Dee Roshong, coordinator of counseling services, and Dr. Judy Porta, sociology instructor.

The morning session will begin at 9:15 a.m. with a welcome by Dr. Barbara Mertes, dean of Valley Campus. The major address on Love and Friendship Relations will be given by Dr. Gerald W. Smith, author and TV personality.

The session will be followed by eight workshops. Participants may choose one workshop to attend.

The luncheon session, held in the Dublin High School Cafeteria is titled, "Noon Conversations," and will offer participants an opportunity to discuss issues informally with the presenters and workshop leaders. The cost of lunch is $3 and it is optional.

The afternoon session on Work Relationships will be given by Dr. Don Delay, professor of education at the University of San Francisco.

Short courses exploring in depth the issues raised in the symposium will begin the week of Feb. 6.

To register for the symposium and short courses, contact Chabot College-Valley Campus, 3033 Collier Canyon Road, Livermore, 455-5300. Participants may register the morning of the symposium at the college. For luncheon information, call 455-5300.

Volunteers?

The Livermore Senior Citizens Center is seeking volunteers to assist local seniors in filling out their 1977 income tax forms.

The service would begin in February and go through March on Saturday mornings. Those interested should call the Center at 443-1150 for more information.

Rotarians offer awards

The Rotary Foundation of Rotary International is offering five educational awards available to both men and women.

Technical training awards, journalism awards, teachers' awards, and graduate and undergraduate fellowships are available from the organization. Applicants cannot be related by blood or marriage to any Rotarian. They should be interested in world affairs and willing to fulfill a dual role of student and "ambassador of good will" in a host country. Outstanding students, technicians, journalists or teachers are encouraged to apply. Contact John Sarboraria at 447-6000 for information on applications and deadlines.

Downtown

In Livermore there is lively difference of opinion as how best to resolve the mounting problems of traffic and parking in the city's core area.

In Pleasanton the downtown merchants are struggling to work with student representatives from nearby Amador High School to ease the crunch of teenagers that at times threatens to stifle all movement along that commercial hub.

These are not easy questions; but the community can be encouraged in the knowledge that the century - old core area is still a healthy center of attraction, and that there are people in our midst determined to preserve that hub's good health.

There are no simple solutions to the woes that historically attack every city's central area as that community moves from rural to urban status. We do however have stark examples of how not to deal with those problems . . . in San Jose where downtown blight has become a social cancer; in Oakland where millions in state and federal funds are needed to "redevelop" that city's core; and in hundreds of other urban centers across the land.

The best action, the most effective and the least expensive action is to encourage investment from the private sector while the downtown area still has promise, and before taxpayers must pour millions of dollars into resurrecting block after block of business blight.

It is that early action which we are getting in Livermore and Pleasanton; it is that enthusiasm which all of us should applaud.

One kid's view

The police are very much in the news these days. Often that news is not good, prompting public images of cops who don't care, and even cops who hassle the kids.

The recent experience of one Valley youngster seems to offer a different view of local authority. We thought Jeff Bilke's letter to this newspaper was worth calling to your attention in this editorial column...

... of a good cop

To The Times:

While I was riding to school Thursday, I stopped for a traffic light. It turned green and I started pedaling. All of a sudden my peddal fell off, and I racked out in the middle of the street.

A police car pulled up right in front of me so nobody would hit me. He came over were I was laying. He picked me up, walked me over to his car and ... asked me what was wrong. It was my knee...

He picked up my bike and tried to fix it. He couldn't. He put the bike in the trunk and me in the back seat and took me to the gas station.

He asked for a wrench and he fixed my pedal. He checked other screws and tightened them ... he asked me my name and then sent me to school.

I forgot to ask his name, but I wish I did so I could put it in this letter.

I feel very good to have police like him around. He drives car "404".

Sacramento report

New drinking age

By Dean Tremewan
Capitol News Service

SACRAMENTO — A senate vote is the last legislative obstacle for a proposed amendment to the state Constitution that would lower the legal drinking age in California to 19.

The measure passed its final committee hurdle this week, but faces rigorous moral and legal debate on the senate floor.

The legislation was introduced last year by Assemblyman Louis Papan, D-Daly City.

After pondering the social logic with heated confrontations of calling citizens adults at age 18 but holding the legal drinking age at 21, the Assembly passed the measure. It was amended, however, striking its original provision that called for the legal drinking age to be set at 18.

Papan said he expects the senate to pass the bill. A floor vote is expected this week.

If the measure receives legislative approval the Secretary of State's office will be asked to place it on the June or November California ballot.

As a Constitutional amendment the measure needs approval from the voters before it can become law.

Papan said he introduced the bill not to encourage young people to start drinking, but because society is recognizing adults as anyone over 18.

The 19 year old provision, he said, is a compromise he favors over the current 21 year old age limit.

Assemblyman Alister McAlister was one voice who opposed the measure last session in the Assembly.

Said McAlister, "this bill will encourage alcoholism and the deterioration of our youth."

It is that kind of opposition Papan's controversial measure will face on the senate floor.

But Papan and other supporters of the bill maintain that recent studies indicate that lowering the drinking age has little or no effect on drunk driving statistics, alcohol abuse or alcohol induced crime.

Papan bases his contention that a lower drinking age will not have adverse effects in California based on comparison studies of other states.

Hindsight/Foresight

On the other hand

Kent Rees, new president of the Pleasanton School District's Amador Valley Teachers Association, came up with a pretty good idea last week about how to handle the search for a new superintendent.

And a number of months ago a broad-based committee in the San Ramon Valley School District recommended a year-round schools program at four southern section schools in that district.

The two idea/recommendations have something in common . . . neither, apparently, will be implemented!

Rees had suggested the Amador and Pleasanton school boards not hire a consultant to search-out superintendent candidates. He contended the districts could locate qualified applicants through advertising of the position in education journals and "word of mouth." Trustees, principally Amador board president Geraldine Donaldson, thanked him for his "in-put" but said they would probably go the consultant route anyway.

The San Ramon committee, known as the Year-Round Schools Study Committee, labored for months to compile data and a recommendation to the school board.

Trustees diligently reviewed the report, initially at a well-attended public meeting at Monte Vista High School, and even went so far as to endorse the recommendation. The bid was to implement year-round school programs, on a pilot basis, at up to four schools. Schools named were Walt Disney, Montevideo, Twin Creeks, and Green Valley.

But sometime between mid-fall and winter the idea of a YRS program chilled in the hearts and minds of district staff.

Ditto an overwhelming number of parents at the four schools noted.

So there'll be no year-round school program starting July 1, and maybe never.

District leadership is apparently pinning its student housing plans on portables for the short term . . . and possibly a $10 million bond election in March of 1979 for the long term.

Portables may be the saviour of not only the San Ramon district but Pleasanton and Murray, too.

In Pleasanton's case, trustees learned late last year that enrollment projections show they could drop 960 in enrollment over the next three years.

The district has a portables facility at Vintage Hills, though to postulate that this would be the first facility "to go" IF the district made cutbacks would not only be crying "fire" but quite possibly totally wrong.

Besides, the school presently holds just 220 students or so.

But, to return to Rees' suggestion for a moment, it might be worth further consideration at the remaining community, administrator and classified "in-put" meetings coming up.

The first of the community sessions was held last night. Still to come are district resident in-put sessions at Foothill High School library Thursday night (at 8 o'clock) and at the Dublin High School library Tuesday, Jan. 31. Administrators in the two districts will gather Feb. 2 and classified employees Feb. 7.

The problem in any executive search is that the originating body feels it must do 'what everyone else does . . . hire a consultant and have that person establish the guidelines and do the spade work to bring-in applications.

I really believe there are a sufficient number of people in this area to accomplish that task . . . a task, by the way, that should be totally theirs to begin with.

Letters to the Times

Feinberg remembered

Editor, The Times:

Yesterday found me joining my colleagues in speculating on what Chief Lindgren Really did. But, this morning I awoke realizing that all of Livermore should be asking what has the City Council Really done?

Just a few years ago my family was dumped into a similar cesspool of bureaucratic bungling. Friction from personality differences between my former husband and some of his fellow teachers could have been channeled into positive and beneficial action by a less threatened administration. Instead, they produced the Feinberg case.

I know nothing about the Police department, nothing about city politics, but I do know that the Lindgren family should not have to live through the muck that ours did. City Council-persons, what have you created?

School superintendent

Copy of a letter to the Pleasanton Elementary and Amador Valley High School boards of trustees:

It is respectfully requested that the school boards of both elementary and high schools, give some thought to interviewing the available candidates within the district, prior to hiring a consulting firm.

As a taxpayer, I feel that the quality of individuals on both school boards is exceptional. The task of interviewing candidates for School Superintendent should not be that difficult. It seems to me, the taxpayer requires more from public servants than "lip service."

As a product of Pleasanton Schools from the second grade through high school, I think, the school boards have done a commendable job through the years; but on occasion, such as the one confronting your honorable Board at this time, there seems to ba a lack of understanding for the taxpayer. As a recipient of the greatest share of property tax revenue, I feel it incumbent upon school boards to save tax monies wherever possible.

Should every school district in the state be considered "stepping stones" for the ambitious? Should not the longtime, knowledgeable current employees be considered first? Should not taxpayers be considered in your deliberations on spending consultant fees?

These are points of interest for all who pay and all who spend taxes.

Job's Daughters

Editor, The Times:

I would like to say thank-you to the community for their support in helping the Job's Daughters Christmas Tree Pick-Up. The project was a great success!

I would like to say a special thank-you to the Valley Times for their support by running our article so much.

During the Christmas Tree pick-up we found two gold ornaments. One was of a girl and a boy kissing with a name engraved on each figure. The other was a drummer boy with a name engraved on it also. If either of these could be yours, please call 455-6798 and identify the name.

Thank-you again for all the support you gave us. For without it our project would not have been the success that it was.

Supports Sidhu

Editor, The Times:

After following the present Council for sometime, the candidacy of Gurnam Sidhu for the Livermore City Council comes like a refreshing breeze. I am impressed with Sidhu's ideas on realistic shopping facilities and business conditions. He believes that improvement of retail business can help out young, low income and senior citizens more than many forms of aid can.

When it comes to originality and imagination Gurnam Sidhu leads all candidates in the field. I like his sense of humor and fairness and I am happy to support such an outstanding candidate for the City Council.

Re: letter from student Carlene Cassidy requesting the Valley Times to further explain and detail a very current event (meetings of Begin and Sadat).

Now is the perfect time for Harvest Park School teachers to instruct their students on how to use a library. Or perhaps, now is the time for the teachers and students to learn together how to make use of libraries and all their bountiful information.

Since when did newspapers prepare reports for students needs? Seems to me research (looking up sources and reading) is the way to gain knowledge and not relying on someone else to do it for you.

round the town

I can keep my terrible secret no longer.

I wish to reveal to the world that I am really Art Linkletter's child. The fact that I am also therefore heir to Mr. Linkletter's tv and movie fortune is incidental.

My real motivation is to clear, once and for all, the good name of my dear mother who, regrettably, made just one little mistake in her life. Me.

You know, of course, that Art Linkletter bills himself as "The loose jaw from Moose Jaw." In Saskatchewan, that is. It is a small corner of the Canadian prairies where few live, and fewer still depart.

Art Linkletter is one of those who escaped the cold clutches of that prairie town. I am another. Until now, our relationship has been one of the world's best kept secrets. ... ranking right up there with the Howard Hughes' will, or the illegitimate meanderings of Henry Ford.

I know, you are going to say that I am revealing my link to Linkletter at this time just to cash in on that man's fortune. The same sordid motivation that prompted Henry Ford's illegitimate offspring to spring now prompts me to tell all, you will charge.

Not so. I care little that my dear daddy went from the miseries of Moose Jaw to fame and fortune with America's teeny boppers ... getting the little blighters to spill their guts before the tv cameras while Art rolled in the dough.

Nor I am interested in Mr. Linkletter's success in developing the Australian Outback, finding a harvest of dollars there, while I have been able to harvest nothing more than three Australian - American grandchildren.

No, all I want right now is to have Arthur Linkletter take me in his arms once more and call me "Son!" I desire nothing more than to hear once again the machine - gun chatter of his famous monosyllables, telling me about life on the snow - swept Saskatchewan plains which we once shared.

Will he talk to me about life in the Moose Jaw Billiard Parlour? Will he recall how he, and later me too, skated the length of Moose Jaw Creek ... from late September through to early April?

Or perhaps he will just bring out the old family album ... revealing poignant pages of pictorial prairie life ... shooting the heads off of gophers in the lazy summer afternoons, outlegging the local constables after a nocturnal autumnal raid on the city's crab apple orchard.

Ah yes, I remember it well.

I do not, in truth, remember much about my daddy, the "Loose jaw from Moose Jaw." That wasn't all that was loose, apparently. We had social standards tied still to the nomadic Cree Indians who, after being forced from their happy hunting in the Dakotas and thence north across the 49th parallel, settled at last along the banks of the Kisisskatchewan River, there to plant the first wheat, and the first Russian Thistle. Both have flourished ever since.

Perhaps, somewhere in my distant past, there is a Cree Indian grandpapa. (Does "Linkletter" sound a little Cree to you?") Certainly the relationship of one town's "Jaw" to the loose lip of one Arthur L. is not lost on prairie historians.

But all that matters not. I want only now to find my roots, to clear the air, to own up to the sin of my parents which has, through all these years, denied me my birthright.

(I can only thank God that Art Linkletter didn't do his Canadian capers in Quebec, thereby linking me to those crazy French Canucks. Life is no bowl of cherries as it is, but it's sure better than drowning in a bowl of pea soup.)

Now that I have told all, you can expect momentarily to hear from Art Linkletter. His side of the story of our misguided start in life. How he regrets having left Moose Jaw, mother and me, to the parched perils of prairie existence.

And what, you ask, if Art Linkletter cares to deny that he ever heard of me or my mother? No matter, this still makes a swell story. One that could easily fill a best - selling paperback. Or at least one column in an otherwise dull Wednesday.

Earl Waters

Shocker

Assemblyman Vincent Thomas sat quietly in the Assembly Chamber a few days ago amongst 119 other House members and Senators. He seemed pale and shaken as he listened to Governor Jerry Brown present his record shattering $17.5 billion one year state budget.

"Is something the matter, Vince?" a colleague asked.

"You know," he said, "I was just thinking. When I first came here the budget was barely $500 million. And that was for two full years! Yet, they called the governor a spendthrift! Now everyone seems to take this kind of spending for granted."

Thomas wasn't making up a story. He had arrived in Sacramento in 1941 to find Governor Culbert L. Olson under fire from the so-called "Economy Bloc." That was a coalition of Democrats and Republicans who saw Olson leading the state down the path to financial ruin and vowed to squeeze every drop of fat out of the budget.

Their alarm wasn't totally without foundation. The federal budget for the entire United States in 1940 was only $10 billion, $7.5 billion below what Brown has proposed this year for California alone.

Thomas has lived through more dramatic changes in the state's budgeting than any other legislator. A football star at the University of Santa Clara where he coached boxing and swimming teams, he was first elected from his San Pedro district in 1940. He is now completing his 38th year in the Assembly, the longest service in that house in history. His seniority makes him the undisputes dean of the Legislature.

He recalls when the state shifted from a biennial to an annual budget.

"That was back in 1948 when Earl Warren was governor. He didn't want to go down in history as the first governor with a billion dollar budget so he urged the change to an annual budget. The next year state spending hit the billion dollar mark anyway."

Under Governor Goodwin J. Knight the budget creeped up near the two billion level. Compared to the Warren-Knight increases, Governor Pat Brown managed to hold things down reasonably well leaving office with a budget under $4 billion which included huge one time spending for the State Water Project.

Despite his promises to "cut, trim and squeeze," Ronald Reagan reigned over the biggest spending increases in the state's 125 year history and left with a budget over $10 billion, more than 2 and a half times greater than when he was sworn in eight years earlier.

Jerry Brown, who has adopted as a posture Reagan's image of frugality, has nevertheless now come close to doubling state expenditures in just three years. For even though his budget proposals call for $17.4 billion, past experience has shown that when the final accounting for the fiscal year is made various appropriations have upped the total.

Thomas makes no attempt to explain the astronomical increases which have occurred in state spending during his years at the Capitol. That is understandable. It seems to defy explanation for neither growth nor inflation provide the parallel. If those were the sole factors, triple the budget for population increases and multiply that by 10 for inflation and the budget would still be under $8 billion.

Maybe the fact that legislators were paid only $100 a month when Thomas got here and now receive $1200 a month just in living expenses with a $23,000 annual salary on top of that has made them looser with the taxpayers' money.

Berry's World

"And now about all those promises I made during the heat of the campaign — heck, NOBODY'S PERFECT!"

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I have always been attracted to older men. About a year ago I met the man I married. He was well-educated, had a good job and had traveled extensively. Though he was bald, I considered that a plus too, for I had often heard that baldness was a sign of virility. Obviously, that must be an old wives' tale for loving is the last thing my husband has to offer. I realized that the disparity in our ages would preclude expectation of the kind of torrid romance a person could look forward to from a younger man. However, his hands-off attitude has me ready to head for the divorce court. Is there any way I can warm him up? R.D.

DEAR R.D.: Baldness as a sign of virility is not just an old wives' tale, but has some basis in research. Yet, like so many conclusions, it's a broad generalization that may not apply to your husband.

It would seem that you should have had some indication of his sexual aloofness during courtship. An older man with a young woman, while not necessarily evidencing the ardency of a younger suitor, could be expected to show a certain amount of passion.

There may be a number of reasons for this indifference. Perhaps his job and responsibilities emotionally drain him. Workaholic men are more wed to their work than their wives.

It's possible there is a physical reason for his lack of sexuality. Male menopause may have deprived him of some of his ardor. Most women don't realize that men can be as emotionally bothered by this middle-age change of life as they.

One distinct consideration could be that, since there is such a gap in age, he looks upon you more as a daughter than wife.

For any or all these reasons, you should first be understanding; second, communicative about how you feel; and finally, demonstrative, initiating with feminine charms the romantic mood you desire. You may be surprised at his response.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My fiance and I plan to be married in the spring. But we are beginning to wonder if it's all worthwhile. We are in our late 20s and therefore have many friends who have already gone the wedding route. Unfortunately many have also gone the divorce route, and even some of the older people we know are splitting after years of marraige. Is divorce becoming the ultimate goal of modern marriage or is it that people just aren't trying as hard to make a life together as they did before? Maybe we should consider just living together. That way if we broke up there'd be no legal hassling. K. R.

DEAR K. R.: There is no denying that the divorce rate has soared in the past decade or so, dissolving nearly half of the marriages performed.

Yet there is also no denying that a couple truly devoted to each other, willing to communicate their shared likes and differences, and capable of demonstrating tolerance and understanding of one another's real or imagined shortcomings can have a happy and productive marriage.

Your mistake is in using marriage failures as examples. It would be better if you looked to those who have stabilized their relationships. Talk to them. Find out how they manage as a team and pattern your lives accordingly.

Living together without exchanging vows may seem the simplest solution, but the strains are no less easy than in marriage nor is the possible break-up any less traumatic.

You are both mature eough to evaluate what has happened to your friends That knowledge plus a positive attitute dtoward your own marriage should provide a head start for your lives as man and wife.

Penguins are unusual sea birds that live along the shores of the southern oceans. They cannot fly, but walk upright with an amusing, clumsy waddle.

Long ago the penguin could fly as well as other birds. But the penguin has lived for ages in such remote places as the Antarctic, where it has few human or animal enemies.

Since food was plentiful and enemies were few, there was little need to fly. Thus it came to spend all its time on land or in the water. For many generations it did not fly.

In the course of long evolution, the penguin's wings became small and stiff and useless for flying.

But it became a good swimmer and diver.

Its flipperlike wings enable the penguin to speed through the water at speeds up to 25 miles per hour. Its short, dense feathers form a waterproof coat and a thick layer of fat keeps it warm in the icy cold regions where it lives.

"I WISH HE WOULDN'T TAILGATE!"

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In August of 1972 my husband suffered a grand mal seizure while sleeping. A brain scan, EEG and complete evaluation found no cause for the seizure.

The doctors prescribed Dilantin which he took for a while, then quit. He was all right for over a year. Then he had three severe seizures, one after the other. A repeat evaluation again failed to show any cause for his seizures.

Again, he was put on Dilantin and he took it faithfully twice a day. During the next two years he again had some light seizures, but only one at a time and he recovered quickly.

What can be the cause of these seizures and why should they have started at the age of 49? There is no history of epilepsy in his family, he has suffered no severe head injury and he is not a heavy drinker. I am concerned as to what these seizures might do to him. The doctor says not to worry as long as he takes his medicine but I'm not so sure.

DEAR READER — You have to realize that over half of all cases of epilepsy occur without any apparent cause. This common form of epilepsy is called "idiopathic" as opposed to "acquired" which has an identifiable cause.

The other point your husband's history makes is that many people who develop epilepsy do not have a family history of the disorder. The relatively low incidence of children of parents of epileptics and the occurrence of epilepsy in people with no family history as in your husband's case demonstrates that the chances of inheriting epilepsy are not very great.

Jan. 25, 1978

This coming year you will greatly expand your circle of close friends to numbers greater than you thought possible. You might even have a camaraderie with one from a distant land.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb.19) A favorite companion and you are on the same wave length today where fun things are concerned. You could have a ball together, whatever you do.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Conditions at work are harmonious today, but they could also be very good for you in unrelated areas like a development to benefit the entire family.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) As a manager today you are extremely responsive to those under you, but yet you are responsible to those you represent. An effective, pleasing combination.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Imagination and determination are your two greatest assets today. If you really choose to do something, you'll finish without hesitation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If there's something you want to discuss with your mate or sweetheart, today might be the day. You'll rediscover the right approach.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your instincts in business or financial matters are exceptionally acute today. Allow yourself to be guided by them. You'll probably turn a profit.

LEO (July 23 - Aug.22) Dealing with youngsters will be rewarding for both you and them today. You have a knack for holding their interest so they get your message.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept.22) Today you'll go about doing your good deeds quietly without need of or desire for an audience. You may even aid someone who'll never become aware of it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You can orchestrate the performance because you're good at manipulating the movements of large groups or big ideas. Take over the podium.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov.22) Through your own self-reliance, conditions are favorable for you in your career, status or finances today. You could benefit in one area, or in all three.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov.23-Dec. 21) Your judgment is exceptionally keen today and if you have a decision you've been holding off, make it now. It should be the right one.

CAPRICORN (Dec.22-Jan. 19) Run in tandem today. Joint ventures show great promise for you. One caution: if your counterpart wants secrecy, keep your lip buttoned.

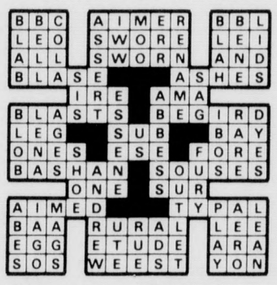
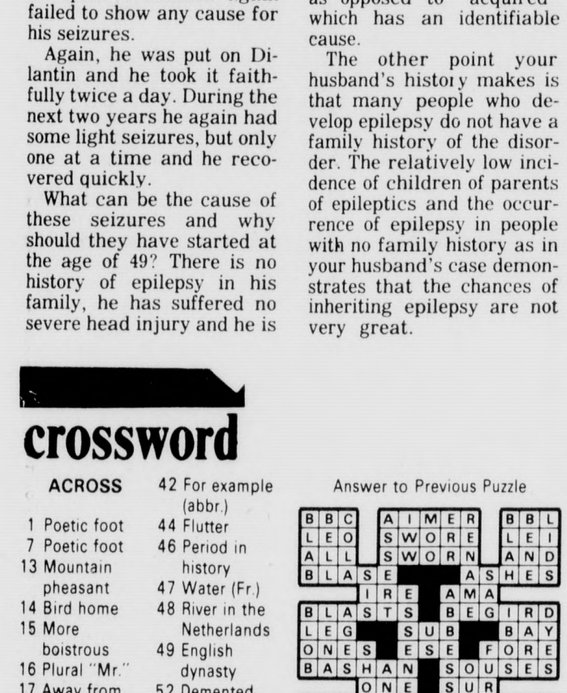
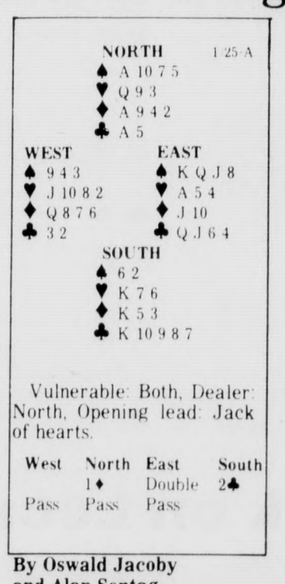
Answer to Previous Puzzle





win at bridge



Vulnerable: Both, Dealer: North, Opening lead: Jack of hearts.

West	North	East	South
	1♦	Double	2♣
Pass	Pass	Pass

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Declarer probably should have been in a notrump, part-score contract, but he bid his club suit over the takeout double and everyone passed.

The bidding left a good deal to be desired, but South redeemed himself. His play would be nothing short of magnificent.

South won the opening heart lead with the king and led a low heart to dummy's nine, which was taken by East's ace.

East returned the king of spades, which declarer allowed to win. East switched to hearts and South won with dummy's queen. Declarer quickly captured the next five tricks: ace of spades, low spade ruffed in declarer's hand with the seven, king of diamonds, ace of diamonds, last spade ruffed with the eight of clubs.

The players were each down to four cards. East had his original four clubs. North had two low diamonds and the A 5 of clubs. West had the Q 8 of diamonds and the 3 2 of clubs. South had the five of diamonds and the K 10 9 of clubs.

South led the losing diamond from his hand which was won by West with the queen. But East, down to nothing but trump, had to ruff his partner's good trick with the four. East now was end played. If East led the Q or J from his hand South would play his nine, win with the ace in dummy and finesse East's remaining trump honor.

If East leads his low club, declarer wins with the nine and takes the last two tricks with the A K. East in effect, had taken no trump tricks on this hand. He had simply ruffed his partner's winner and his seemingly impregnable trump holding had crumbled.

The joke's on '60 Minutes'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS's "60 Minutes" takes things so seriously a reaction was bound to set in. It has. You'll see it for an hour tonight in an NBC special called "Peeping Times."

The show is co-anchored by Dave Letterman and Allan Oppenheimer. At the start, they flank an empty chair and explain that the third co-anchor, Arnie Vespuli, "is on assignment."

Lest you suspect this is a spoof of "60 Minutes," well, consider the stories covered and exposes expounded.

They include illegal aliens, victimless crime, pornography, religious fashions, America's need for more fat in its diet and a New York longshoreman's long fight to become a nun.

There's even an interview with an informer on organized crime.

True, the informer, filmed in shadows to hide his identity, does inadvertantly give his name, his address and expose his face by lighting a cigarette. But it is a serious interview.

So is Letterman's inquiry of a U.S. border guard in the report on illegal aliens. Alas, it must be said Letterman fails to note the many illegal aliens seen tiptoeing across the border during the interview.

Oppenheimer's follow-up chat with a convicted alien-smuggler is remarkable. No matter that the felon claims the most common method of alien-smuggling is through the mail, by parcel post.

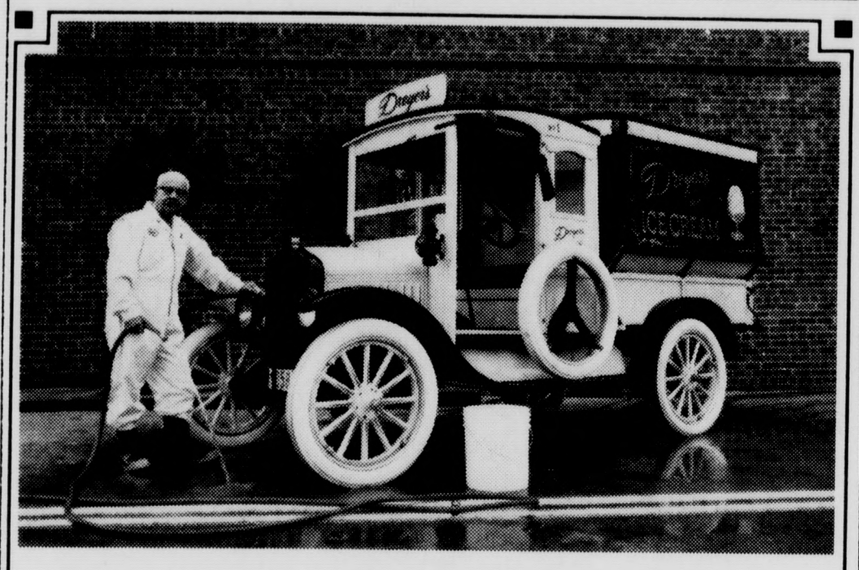
"I mailed at least three dozen to North Dakota," he says. Then he shows how to pack an illegal alien in a box for shipment. It is a moment of great impact or something.

There is a labored, inconclusive segment on how the town of Yule, Wash., turned rumors of a monster called Bigfoot into a tourist industry that even includes "Bigfoot Burritos."

And you may find it hard to swallow when, in a report on victimless crime, a man doing two to five years in prison claims he was jailed just because he taped a televised baseball game "without the express written consent of the commissioner."

Come to think of it, it's harder to believe a segment on nutrition in which a scientist, having fed mice refried beans, soul food and some sandwiches, concludes: "All foods cause cancer."

I also think the show just made up its story on a self-help hospital where the patients and their families diagnose their own ailments and even operate with the aid of easy-to-understand charts.



This old Model T recalls the days when Bill Dreyer delivered his celebrated ice cream by hand. That's our Shorty Francis shining it up.

He does it because he wants to. Because it's part of the pride folks here show in making (and delivering) our gourmet ice cream.

This Week on Local Television...

A FIVE-PART report on "Growing Old" is scheduled during the noon and 6 p.m. newscasts this week on Channel 4. Reporter Terry Lowry explores growing old, contrasting experiences of old age, and discusses the elderly's most common concerns: crime, failing health, loneliness and financial worries.

THIS WEEK'S "Alma De Bronce," at 11:30 a.m. Sunday on Channel 4 will explore the land barony of General Mariano Guadalupe Vallejo, who once controlled more than 175,000 acres in what is now Sonoma County. Program host Sylvia Fernandez visits his 130 year old Petaluma Adobe and discusses his effect on California.

NEW ORLEANS, the plight of American farmers and an update on Cuban terrorists in Miami are scheduled on "CBS Reports" at 8 p.m. Tuesday on Channels 5 and 10. Bill Moyers is correspondent for the program.

PERSONALITIES representing every facet of the entertainment world will help celebrate the "Kraft 75th Anniversary Special," at 9:30 p.m. Tuesday on Channels 5 and 10. Scheduled on the program are Bob Hope, Leslie Uggams, Bob Crosby, Hal Peary, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Milton Berle, Alan King, Donna McKechnie, and Roy Clark. Each of the performers has been associated with a Kraft-sponsored radio or television program during the 45 years the company has used the broadcasting for its corporate and product advertising.

COMEDIAN ROBERT Klein this week pays a return visit to NBC's "Saturday Night Live." Klein will be host for the program at 11:30 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

THE OCCUPANTS of a sorority house in a small-town college are terrorized by a mysterious caller who follows up his threats with murder in "Stranger in the House," at 9 p.m. Saturday on Channels 3 and 4. Stars include Olivia Hussey, Keir Dullea, Margot Kidder and John Saxon.

THE FIRST ANNUAL Mike Douglas National Football League Players Association Golf Classic is scheduled at 11:30 a.m. Saturday and 12:30 p.m. Sunday on Channel 2. The $50,000 tournament will feature top name players from each of the 18 teams of the National Football League.

'Killer' satellite seen possible in blast

YELLOWKNIFE, Canada — A group of Bay area scientists was being rushed here as part of a 25 - member U.S. team sent to investigate the crash site of what one expert says might have been a Russian "killer" satellite, not a meek "spy" sputnik as reported by official government agencies.

Meanwhile, a nuclear engineer acting as technical advisor to consumer advocate Ralph Nader said as many as 40 people could have been killed by radioactive fallout if the Soviet satellite carrying a nuclear reactor had re-entered the atmosphere over a large population center like New York City where he is based.

At least a half-dozen Lawrence Livermore Laboratory personnel and space technology experts from the San Ramon-based EG&G corporation were routed here from Las Vegas Monday afternoon. An LLL spokesman would not say how many personnel from the Livermore nuclear center were sent, nor comment on their fields of expertise.

But Heinz Kaminski of the Institute for Space Research in Bochum, West Germany, said the satellite's 100-pound power pack of highly radioactive Uranium 235 indicates it was a "killer" satellite.

Kaminski said it is the only type of satellite that requires so much energy because it uses it to power laser beams.

Smaller "nuclear batteries" with one or two kilos — two to four pounds — of uranium are less dangerous, but still an unnecessary risk because the same amount of energy can be produced from sunlight, he said.

"Killer" satellites would be set to knock out another country's "spy" satellites, and already have been tested by the Soviets, according to the Defense Department.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown, himself a former LLL director, has said the Soviet antisatellite weapon is "operational," or at least ready for use.

Ben Huberman, an aide to U.S. national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, said the Soviets have launched at least 10 nuclear reactor-powered satellites, but this was the first to have dropped from orbit. The United States launched only one uranium-powered satellite, in 1965, and it is still in orbit.

U.S. and Soviet officials have been talking of a treaty to ban antisatellite weapons, both ground-based and the "hunter-killer" satellite variety.

The U.S. has contracted with the Vought Corp. of Dallas to develop its own "killer" satellite. The Soviet version reportedly is of the "kamikaze" type that would smash into another satellite and explode.

Reacting to the accident, nuclear critic John Abbotts said as many as 40 people could have been killed, another 500 injured, and $200 million in property damaged if it had fallen in a more heavily populated area.

The nuclear engineer and Ralph Nader advisor said that number of deaths could have occurred if the reactor had completely burned in the lower atmosphere and covered the metropolitan area with radiation.

But the Cosmos 95 satellite apparently disintegrated in the upper atmosphere over northwest Canada about 850 miles from the U.S. border.

Abbotts is a member of "Critical Mass," a consumer organization concerned with nuclear safety.

Brzezinski earlier said there would have been "some concerns over hazards to health" if it had come down in a heavily populated area.

In Canada, Defense Minister Barney Danson said he was "98 percent or more" certain the satellite had burned up in the atmosphere.

Canadian officials said any pieces of the satellite would have slammed into the earth in a sparsely settled area 60 miles east of Yellowknife, a frontier town of 8,000 on Great Slave Lake.

U.S. and Canadian officials said there was probably no serious danger. But five U.S. military airplanes joined later by four Canadian planes flew to the scene to check for radioactivity and possible remnants of the fallen spacecraft.

"I don't think there is any cause for hysteria," Danson said at an Ottawa news conference.

President Carter and Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau were discussing the situation by telephone moments after the satellite entered the atmosphere at 3:53 a.m. PST.

Within hours, Trudeau was defending the government's handling of the incident.

Other Canadian and U.S. officials said the location could not be predicted until early Tuesday.

Energy funds to give away

Martin Gottlieb
Special to The Times

WASHINGTON — One of the factors limiting government expenditures on energy research is a growing willingness on the part of private researchers to spend their own money on other projects, especially on those which promise early payoff.

Congress decided in 1976 to abet this phenomenon. It created a Geothermal Resources Development Fund to provide loan guarantees for private researchers. The understanding was clearly that if this technique worked for geothermal, it could be expanded to other forms of energy.

However, this year, far from proposing other loan guarantees the Department of Energy is not even asking for new funding for the geothermal. The reason: it still has most of the $300 million appropriated for 1977 and 1978.

Nevertheless, at a budget press briefing over the weekend, DOE officials denied the program was a failure.

"It's true the applications didn't come in at first with the speed we thought they would," said one official. "But there are some pending now which look quite promising."

He insisted the Department is as committed to the program as ever.

A group of 10 prominent scientists, including four Nobel Prize winners, hit Washington last week to lobby for increased spending on research.

While physically they got lost among the protesting farmers who were every place one turned, politically they did seem to have some impact. Rep. Paul Rogers (D — Fla.), chairman of the same House subcommittee which is this week holding hearings on low-level radiation of federal employees, agreed to introduce a bill to provide about one-quarter billion dollars a year for new research.

The scientists argued that federal offices which fund independent money research now give money to only 30 percent of all applicants. They said the figure in 1967 was 50 percent.

The scientists said the public is in an "anti-science" mood which results from, among other things, the failure of the "cure it now" approach to cancer research.

President Carter last week requested an 11 percent increase in the funding of research through such agencies as the National Science Foundation and the National Institutes of Health. The Department of Energy, as a unit with mission beyond simply funding research, would not be included.

The Defense Department is about to test the Cruise missile against seven types of air defenses. The results of those tests could have an effect on the future of the B-1, funding for which is still more or less pending in Congress. Earlier tests were reported to have shown the Cruise to be at too early a stage of development to be relied on as an alternative to the B-1 , which is the Carter proposal.

President Carter has suggested that Congress allocate a half billion dollars in fiscal 1979 to research and development on the Cruise.

The quotas of the Cruise say the upcoming tests will verify computer simulations which indicate defense against the Cruise simply can't be done. Some of the tests are to be conducted with captured Soviet surface-to-air missiles.

Budget's political impact

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, whose political rivals used to accuse him of trying to play to both sides of the issues, may be hearing complaints from both sides now that he has put the promises into numbers.

Worse things could happen to him.

For if there is liberal dissatisfaction with the scope of his domestic programs, there is concern even among Democratic leaders about the sheer size of his $500.2 billion budget, $60.6 billion in the red. Republicans are sure to seize upon that latter figure during the campaign year ahead.

In the end, those conflicting concerns may work to Carter's political advantage. The genuis of his campaign was that it cast him in the center, and his budget may do the same thing.

It seems to bear out the description of Carter attributed to Bert Lance, who once was quoted as saying that he campaigns liberal and governs conservative.

On some points, the Carter budget does not quite match the Carter campaign. That tends to happen when it comes time to put dollar signs on the items in any political platform, which may explain why losing platforms tend to survive longer than winners.

In his budget message, Carter made a point of citing a campaign promise he said he had kept by curbing defense spending, even though he increased the Pentagon budget to $126 billion. "Consistent with campaign pledges to the American people, it is $8 billion below the defense budget projected for 1979 by the previous administration," Carter said.

But candidate Carter had talked of cutting defense spending not from Gerald R. Ford's projections but from the levels of his administration.

Carter had said flatly that he would balance the federal budget by the end of his first term in office, and he repeated that pledge as recently as late last year.

The projections in his budget fit that pledge, but it is carefully hedged. "This budget places us on a path that will permit a balanced budget in the future if the private economy continues its recovery over coming years," Carter said.

The projections in his budget forecast a surplus in the government year beginning Oct. 1, 1980, but with a cautionary note saying that isn't necessarily going to happen.

"The desirability of achieving these surpluses depends both on economic conditions too far in the future to forecast, and on the need for new or expanded programs or for further tax cuts," the budget summary explains.

There are repeated suggestions of tax cuts beyond the $25 billion Carter is proposing this year, in order to reduce the share of the Gross National Product claimed by the federal Treasury.

His budget speaks of sharing with the taxpayers the benefits of restraint in federal spending, and it warns that Washington can't do everything, not only because of limited resources but also because of limits on the ability of government to cope with problems.

"The span of government is not infinite," Carter said. "Priorities must be set and some old priorities changed. If we are to meet adequately the most critical needs, some demands must also be deferred.

SHARE A SUPPER ...with Easy Food and Conversation

The evening meal is a perfect time to bring friends together for good food, talk and companionship. On short notice, why not try "sharing a supper"? Let everyone join in the food preparation and hostess duties. If you're a super organizer, assign each person or couple to bring a specific dish. Menus like those shown here look like fancy fixings, but they are really simple, basic, easy and delicious.

Chicken still ranks high as a favorite for its versatility and flavor that "goes with everything." Try a yogurt marinade next time you're broiling or baking. Canned pastas offer convenience and versatility, too. Some folks like to "heat'em and eat'em". Try adding a bit of your own magic in the form of fresh vegetables and seasonings. The results taste like you've been cooking for hours.

Relish Pears made with creamy canned Bartletts are a perfect "go-along" with the chicken and pasta. Accented with bright bits of pimiento, parsley, green onion and capers, the pears may be baked with pasta shells and served warm, or prepared ahead and served chilled.

The desserts appeal to two kinds of cooks. For the do ahead person, the Fabulous Wheat Germ Raspberry Pie is perfect. The baked shell is made with vacuum packed wheat germ and graham cracker crumbs. The colorful filling is done on the mixer with a package of luscious frozen raspberries and a few other basic ingredients. Whipped cream smooths out the texture and flavor. To give it a professional look, pipe some whipped cream on top too. Store this dessert in the freezer for safekeeping.

The last minute cook will really go for the Wheat Germ Pear Swirl. Take your choice of using regular wheat germ or wheat germ with sugar & honey in the dough. The spicy filling is done with canned Bartlett pears. The nutty biscuit dough can be rolled up in a jiffy and should be served fresh from the oven.

FAVORITE YOGURT MARINATED CHICKEN

1 broiler-fryer chicken, cut into serving parts
1 cup plain yogurt
1-1/2 teaspoons salt
1 small clove garlic, crushed
1/2 teaspoon cardamom
1/2 teaspoon chili powder
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon ginger

Place chicken parts in a shallow baking dish. Combine all other ingredients for marinade. Pour over chicken parts. Marinate in refrigerator for at least two hours. Place chicken skin side down on broiler rack. Set oven temperature at broil. Have chicken 3 to 6 inches from heat in gas range and 6 to 9 inches from heat in electric range. Broil chicken 20 to 25 minutes; turn and broil 15 to 20 minutes longer. May use yogurt marinade as basting sauce for chicken. Serves four.

RELISH PEARS

1 can (29 oz.) Bartlett pear halves
1/2 lemon, thinly sliced
1/4 cup white wine vinegar
Juice of 1 lemon
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon capers
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
2 tablespoons minced parsley
2 tablespoons chopped green onion

Drain pears, reserving 1/3 cup pear syrup. Arrange pears and lemon slices in baking dish. Combine reserved pear syrup with remaining ingredients. Pour mixture over pears. Bake in 350°F. oven 15 minutes, or until pears are heated through. Serve warm or chilled as a garnish. Makes 8 servings.

PASTA SHELL DIVAN

1 package (10 oz.) frozen broccoli
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
1/4 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons butter
2 cans (15 oz. each) Chef Boy-ar-dee® Macaroni Shells in Tomato Sauce
1 cup sour cream
1 cup shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
6 stuffed olives, sliced

Prepare broccoli according to package directions. Drain well; place on absorbent paper. Sauté green pepper and onion in butter until tender. Add Macaroni Shells, sour cream, cheese and sliced olives; stir. Place broccoli in bottom of casserole, save some florets for garnish; pour pasta shell mixture over. Bake covered for 25 minutes in 350°F. oven. Serves four generously.

FABULOUS WHEAT GERM RASPBERRY PIE

1/4 cup butter
1 cup Kretschmer wheat germ, regular or sugar & honey
3/4 cup graham cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons firmly packed brown sugar
1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen raspberries, thawed
1/3 cup granulated sugar
1 egg white
1/2 cup whipping cream

Cut butter into pats. Place in 9-inch pie plate. Heat in 350°F. oven about 5 minutes or until melted. Add 1/2 cup wheat germ, cracker crumbs and brown sugar. Stir to blend. Reserve 2 tablespoons crumbs mixture for topping. Press remaining mixture on bottom and sides of pie plate. Return to oven and bake 5 to 8 minutes until lightly browned. Cool. Combine undrained raspberries, granulated sugar and egg white. Blend at low speed. Beat with electric mixer at high speed 10 minutes until firm peaks form. Whip cream until it holds its shape. Fold whipped cream and remaining 1/2 cup wheat germ into raspberry mixture. Turn into baked shell. Sprinkle with reserved crumbs. Freeze 3 to 4 hours until firm. Garnish with additional whipped cream if desired. Wrap frozen pie in plastic wrap for longer storage. Makes 1 (9-inch) pie.

CHICKEN-CHEESE RAVIOLI CASSEROLE

3 tablespoons cooking oil
1 tablespoon butter
1 broiler-fryer chicken, cut into serving parts
1/4 cup chopped onion
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
1 can (6 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
2 cans (15 oz. each) Chef Boy-ar-dee® Cheese Ravioli in Beef and Tomato Sauce
1/4 cup chopped pimiento
1 cup table cream
dash hot pepper sauce
1 package (10 oz.) Chinese pea pods
3 tablespoons toasted slivered almonds

Combine cooking oil and butter. Heat in medium sized skillet. Fry chicken parts until lightly browned. Remove browned parts to warm platter. Sauté onion and pepper in remaining butter. Add drained sliced mushrooms and Cheese Ravioli in Beef and Tomato Sauce. Cover; simmer for 5 minutes. Add pimiento, light cream and hot pepper sauce. Stir gently. Cook Chinese pea pods according to package directions. Add to Ravioli mixture. Place layer of chicken on bottom of buttered baking dish. Pour Ravioli mixture over. Arrange remaining chicken on top; cover. Bake for 45 minutes in 350°F oven. Garnish with toasted almonds. Serves four generously.

WHEAT GERM PEAR SWIRL

1 can (16 oz.) Bartlett pear halves
1-1/2 cups flour
1 cup Kretschmer wheat germ, regular or sugar & honey
3 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup melted butter, divided
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup brown sugar, packed
1-1/2 teaspoons cinnamon

Drain and chop pears. Set aside. Mix flour, 1/2 cup wheat germ, baking powder, granulated sugar and salt. Stir in 1/4 cup butter and milk to form dough. Roll out on floured surface to 15x9-inch rectangle. Mix remaining 1/2 cup wheat germ, 1/4 cup melted butter, brown sugar and cinnamon. Sprinkle over dough. Top with even layer of chopped pears. Roll, starting from long side. Cut into 10 slices. Place slices, cut side down, in buttered 9-inch round layer cake pan. Bake in 400°F. oven 30 to 35 minutes or until golden brown on top. Cut into wedges and serve warm. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

RASPBERRY COCKTAILS

Defrost 2 packages (10 oz. each) frozen raspberries. Crush raspberries and put through sieve to remove seeds and pulp. Place raspberry juice over ice in large pitcher. Add 1 pint strong tea and 1 bottle dry white wine. Stir gently. Serve chilled in cocktail glasses.

School Nurses Week

That meeting Amador and Pleasanton school district nurses were called to early Monday morning proved to be a surprise presentation of corsages to all district nurses— this being National School Nurses Week. Charlotte Angel, right, district nurse, pins a corsage on Mary Swift, nurse at Walnut Grove and Alisal, while Eleanor Holman, left, does the honors for Maxine Spruiell, who is assigned to Amador and Dublin High Schools. Mrs. Angel tends to Pleasanton School, Vintage Hills and Valley View and Ms. Holman to Harvest Park and Fairlands. (Times photo)

Child abuse author guest at Valley School

PLEASANTON — Marilyn Sachs, author of a book dealing with battered children, will be luncheon guest today as Harvest Park School starts it annual Authors' Program series.

Ms. Sachs wrote "December Tale," the book on abuse of children, and will have copies available for autographing at the luncheon. Judy Bryer, librarian at the school and program coordinator, will hostess the luncheon in the Harvest Park School library starting at 11:30 a.m.

The benefit luncheon is open to teachers and parents.

Authors scheduled include Dale Fife, Feb. 1; Yoshiko Uchida, Feb. 22; Susan Terris, March 15; Edith Maxwell, April 19, and cartoonist Morrie Turner, May 3.

Ms. Sachs was born in New York City and now lives in San Francisco with her husband and two children. She has written many books for children and her latest is "December Tale."

Ms. Fife, who will be at the school Feb. 1, is probably best known for her books about Lincoln Farnum: "Who's in Charge of Lincoln?", "What's New Lincoln?", and "What's the Prize, Lincoln?"

Health education plan drawn

The Health Education and Parent Health Advisory Committees of the Amador and Pleasanton School Districts are eying an April completion of data collecting for writing of the districts' health education curriculum.

The parent panel is in the process of making recommendations on the "Albany Plan" in three phases: 1) "My Body is Mine," 2) "My Emotions Are Mine," and 3) "My Environment is Mine," from grades kindergarten through twelfth grade.

In already accepting the Albany Plan as a basis to build the districts' own individual health program, the Health Education Committee is seeking community in-put through the parent group so that a complete curriculum will be written and ready for implementation by September.

Chaired by district nurse Charlotte Angel, the Health Education Committee believes a revised Albany Plan "represents an approach it feels is most appropriate for this community.

Health Education Committee members include Carol Ann Buletza, Charlene McKee, Jim Kimball, Shirley Maxwell, Francis J. Valenta, Mary Swift, Eleanor Holman, Pat Ackley, Eleanor Keller, Denise Zarcone, Neil Sweeney, Earnestine Schneider, Karen Lapin, Elizabeth Fleischer, Marilyn McCurdy, Barbara Corrin, Sally Hill, and Sherline Montgomery.

The Parent Health Advisory panel, reviewing the Albany Plan, includes Ms. Lapin, Pat Ackley, Dr. S.J. Ackerman, Saundra Spence, Melinda Maxwell, Janet Brownlee, Mary Smith, Keith Anderson, Gerald Goudreau, Beverly Voorstad, and Mrs. Angel.

Next meeting of the latter committee is Wednesday, Feb. 15 at 7:30 p.m.

Cal High spelling bee

SAN RAMON — Winners of class spelling competitions being held this week will vie in February for the opportunity to represent California High School in the annual National Spelling Bee to be held later this year in Washington, D.C.

The school contest will match the winners from each eighth grade English class.

The winner from California High School will then advance to the Contra Costa County finals which will be held in April. The county winner will then move on to the national finals in the nation's capital, June 5 through June 9, where the winner will receive $1,000, an engraved trophy cup and a plaque. In addition, each national contestant will receive a cash award.

The Daily Ledger and the Pittsburg Press will be sponsoring the county winner, paying for plane tickets, hotel accommodations, meals, and some incidental expenses. Also, they will provide a newspaper escort for the student. Aside from participating in the spelling bee, the student will have the opportunity to do some sightseeing.

The contest itself is open to all students of eighth grade and under and who have not yet reached their 16th birthday.

Joyce Getty, incoming chamber president, shares a happy moment with John Stanley, who was cited for his longtime labor on behalf of Pleasanton.

Lenore Moyers was saluted for "her dedicated labor on behalf of those in need." She was nominated by the Pleasanton Women's Club.

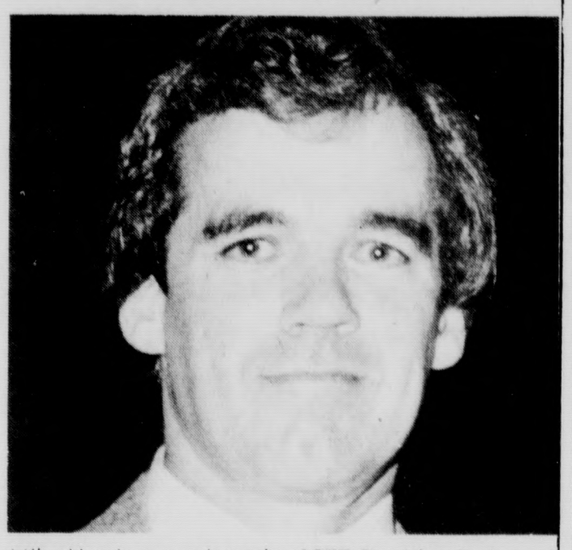
Mr. and Mrs. Larry Boldrini accepted a framed citation given to "the hundreds of people who have made Ballistic Soccer such a wonderful success story."

Awards for top chamber activists

IT WAS AN EVENING of good fun and high tribute as civic and business leaders from throughout the Valley gathered to salute Pleasanton at this Castlewood County Country Club affair.

Hosted by the Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce, Saturday's gathering was highlighted by announcement of Community Development Awards, given to individuals and organizations for outstanding service to the community in the year past. This was the 14th consecutive year the awards were made under the chamber's auspices.

Other high points of the evening were installation of the 1978 slate of chamber officers, and honors to those who have served the business group in the past, including Mike Harris who was given the coveted President's Award by Bill Hirst, the chamber's outgoing leader.



Mike Harris was given the 1977 President's Award for his two-year chairmanship of the chamber's successful membership drives.

Star-studded Stomper stockholders

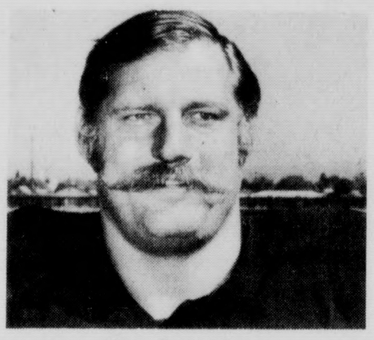
The list just goes on and on...

EMERYVILLE — When soccer fans attend Oakland Stomper games this year they're likely to ask for the autographs of some of the owners more often than the players.

The reason? Names like Ben Davidson, John Brodie and Bill Graham are included among the club's minority stockholders announced yesterday at Trader Vic's here.

Davidson, a Pleasanton resident and former Oakland Raider defensive end, Brodie, ex-San Francisco 49er quarterback and Graham, San Francisco rock promoter, join Dr. Robert Albo, Don DePorter, Bob Darling and George Saxe as limited stockholders.

The Stompers have organized into limited partnership. Milan Mandaric remains the president and majority owner along with general manager



Ben Davidson

Dick Berg and Brad Jefferies. Jefferies is Mandaric's personal attorney and the attorney for the Stompers.

Davidson, who has lived in Pleasanton for several years, feels the sport is gaining rapidly in popularity and should be a hit.

"Yes, it's defintely increasing in popularity," he said as a throng of sportwriters and sportscasters surrounded him. "It's got a lot of advantages over football in some ways.

"For one, kids can grow up playing the sport without as much a chance of injury. The equipment is cheaper. All you need is a ball, shorts and a pair of cleats and you're ready to go."

Ben, who is scheduled to appear on television in an episode of "Eight Is Enough" tonight, feels pro soccer is a good investment.

"I also like those wine posters they have," he laughed. "That's one of our fringe benefits."

Davidson has only seen one professional soccer game — that one being an Oakland Clipper contest where the Raiders and 49ers performed in a soccer game at halftime.

"I got to appreciate the ability of soccer players when I played in that game," he said. "All that running up and down the field requires a lot of talent."

Brodie, who is the only quarterback ever to lead the 49ers to a division title (three times in 1970, 1971 and 1972), was enthused about the sport.

"My kids play it," he said. "It's a fast, exciting game. It's biggest asset is the way it creates enthuasiam among the fans who watch it.

"I'm in this mainly to have fun," he went on. "I'm going to try and be an interested owner and see as many games as I can. I've see a lot of soccer, particularly Earthquake games."

Graham almost became a part-owner of the new Philadelphia franchise before deciding to join the Stompers.

"I had an offer to join several rock stars, including Mick Jagger and Peter Frampton, in buying the Philadelphia club. I committied myself to them verbally before deciding to join the Stompers. I then managed to release myself from the Philadelphia franchise. I would rather be part of a local team anytime."

Graham's attraction to soccer goes back a long ways as he was born in Europe and grew up with the sport.

Albo is the team physician for the Golden State Warriors and was also a standout on the University of California basketball team when he went to school there.

DePorter is the regional vice-president of the Hyatt House Corporation, Darling was the president and chairman of the board of the Connecticut Bicentennials, the club Mandaric brought to the East Bay.

"Under the terms of the sale of the Bicentennials, we have granted Bob a part of the ownership and we are happy to have him aboard," said Mandaric.

Saxe is president of Saxon Enterprises.

Stomper first-round draft choice Andy Atuegbu of USF was at the meeting and commented on an injury he suffered in November.

"It was a knee bruse and I think it hampered my play in the NCAA," he remarked. "But it's feeling fine now. I'm going to the doctor Friday for a final check-up on it."

Correia's three goals help AV dump Falcons

Joe Correia scored all Amador Valley High School's goalsas the Dons defeated Foothill 3-1 to stay in the thick of the East Bay Athletic League soccer race yesterday in Pleasanton.

The Dons moved their record to 6-1-1 in EBAL play while the Falcons dropped to 6-3.

In the first 25 minutes of the contest Amador Valley attacked Foothill's goal several times only to have Falcon goalie Dave Konecny made a couple of diving saves.

However, with 27 minutes elapsed Correia got the ball directly in front of the Falcon net from 12 yards out and banged it in.

The rest of the half the Don fowards and halfbacks made some brillant passes but failed to push any more goals through te net.

The second half featured similar action as Amador Valley continued to apply pressure on the Falcon nets. With 13 minutes gone Correia took a short pass from Phil Espinoza amongst a pile of players and booted the ball into the left hand corner of the net.

Correia added the final goal on an eight-yard shot 35 minutes into the half.

The Falcons put their only goal on the scoreboard when Mark Fish fired in a five-yarder with 35 minutes gone off a Troy Thomas assist.

Foothill managed to threaten several more times in the contest but AV goalie Dave Kinney and some standout defensive play by the rest of the Dons prevented any more scoring.

Amador Valley coach Mike Geib felt it was his team's best offensive effort of the season.

"We passed the ball very well and stayed with our game plan," he commented. "Len Baine did a great job at fullback and Steve Englebrick also stood out.

"We stopped their forwards pretty well and they have some good ones," he went on. "Our offense was particularly impressive since we were playing a good goalie like Konecny."

The Dons had 18 shots on goal to six for the Falcons. Konecny was busy in the nets, grabbing 11 saves. Kinney had five.

In the junior varsity contest Amador Valley breezed to a 4-0 victory.

Livermore 3, California 2

The Cowboys moved their EBAL record to 5-4 as three different players scored goals.

John Howard broke the ice 10 minutes into the half off an assist from Robert Turpin for the 'Pokes.

However, California, now 1-9, came back on Terry Sellars' goal off Chris Paynter's assist just before the half to tie it 1-1 at the break.

But Livermore came back with goals by Carl Grutrick and Dave Rashe to cinch the contest. Turpin had an assist on Grutrick's goal.

Sellars added the final Grizzly goal on a header right in front of the Cowboy net.

Kuhn: vendetta vs. Finley?

NEW YORK — One of the perils that baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn faces in rendering a decision on the Charles Finley-Vida Blue case is that he may be accused of pursuing a personal vendatta.

It is the same slippery ground on which Pete Rozelle, commissioner of the National Football League, stood recently when he slapped a $5,000 fine on Al Davis, managing general partner of the Oakland Raiders.

The two cases are similar only in that they involve two men with czar-like powers forced to act in cases involving persons with whom they have carried on a long-time adversary relationship.

Kuhn and Finley have been at loggerheads for years. The maverick owner of the A's has challenged the commissioner at every turn, often flaunting his contempt for Kuhn's authority.

Similarly, Davis, recognized as one of football's most brilliant intellects, has been feuding with Rozelle since his days as co-founder and commissioner of the rebel American Football League. He joined Los Angeles' Carroll Rosenbloom in an abortive coup to unseat Rozelle about a year ago.

Kuhn, who conducted a second hearing in the baseball case today, is faced with determining whether Finley can sell his ace pitcher, Vida Blue, to the Cincinnati Reds for $1.75 million and a minor league player, Dave Revering. Previously, the commissioner had rejected the sale of Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million and of two other A's stars, Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers, to the Boston Red Sox for $1 million each.

Kuhn justified his decision on the grounds that he could not close his eyes to the dissipation of a franchise.

Some critics asked, how could the New York Mets send baseball's best pitcher, Tom Seaver, to the Reds and how could the Yankees shell out for Bucky Dent and Andy Messersmith, thus strengthening already powerful clubs, while Finley is forbidden the same freedom on the open market on the grounds it would be jeopardizing the game's competitive balance?

Kuhn has his own rationale for such transactions, and he adheres to it, he insists, without regard for personalities.

Blue case

'I can sell him'

NEW YORK — Charles O. Finley, the supersalesman who built an empire on his ability to get doctors to buy malpractice insurance, testified that he had the right to sell his best player Tuesday, one day after the sale of his ballclub apparently fell through.

Finley, the no longer lameduck owner of the Oakland A's, testified to the validity of his December deal that sent lefthanded pitching ace Vida Blue to Cincinnati for $1.75 million and minor league infielder Dave Revering.

Finley said he was optimistic that his deal would be allowed. "By gosh, it's about time I won one," he said.

Finley's testimony came at a six-hour hearing at the office of baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and its thrust was no different than the evidence offered Tuesday by two other interested officials, Bob Howsam of the Cincinnati Reds and Marvin Miller of the Players Association.

"I'm optimistic," said Howsam, president of the Reds. "We think the transaction is in the best interests of baseball."

Miller, executive director of the Players Association, was here to protect the interests of Blue, who did not attend the hearing. According to Peter Rose, legal and administrative assistant of the association, Miller read a statement that declared that the commissioner "had neither the power nor the authority to disapprove the transaction ... There was no major league rule that was violated. The trade was in accord with every written directive. He (Kuhn) didn't even have the authority to hold the hearing."

The validity of the sale, according to major league rules, however, must take a back seat to Kuhn's near-dictatorial power to make unilateral decisioos in what he considers "the best interests of baseball." He said such a decision could be expected within several days. "It could well be this week."

In June 1976, Kuhn canceled the sales of Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million and Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to Boston for $1 million each. In making that landmark decision, he cited his position as the guardian of the national pasttime who was protecting the fans of Oakland and making sure the rich clubs didn't get stronger at the expense of the poor ones.

Robbie raps as Jack inks

LOS ANGELES — Eddie Robinson, longtime head football coach at Grambling University, met with officials of the Los Angeles Rams for six hours Tuesday to discuss the team's vacant head coach position.

"We had a delightful visit," said Rams' President Carroll Rosenbloom. "Eddie's credentials are excellent and we intend to talk to him again."

Jack Pardee, who resigned as the Bears' head coach last Thursday, was chosen to succeed Allen as the Redskins' coach Tuesday.

Warriors lose away— again

NEW YORK — The Golden State Warriors were on the road and they, and their opponents,were playing defense all night long.

If you've been paying attention, class, you know what that means. Right. Another defeat. This one, 99-97, at the hands of the New York Knickerbockers.

For more than a season and one-half now the Warriors have had terrible problems winning those rare games — rare to the National Basketball Association — in which neither team reaches the 100-point plateau.

This season, after an admirable road record last year, the Warriors have won just four times away from the Coliseum. Last night was no different, though Golden State managed to cut New York's lead to a single point on several occasions in the second half.

With :47 left, the Warriors made perhaps their strongest, and certainly their latest challenge when Clifford Ray slammed home a missed Phil Smith jumper.

The Knicks took over and 21 seconds later, Earl Monroe shot an air ball into the hands of Smith, who started a fast break and pulled up to take a 12-foot jumper himself.

But, Jim Cleamons, who made all his four field goal attempts including the one before Ray's dunk that gave the Knicks a three-point edge, deflected the shot and the Warriors, as they might say on the train home from Penn Station, was dead.

Bob McAdoo tried to revive them by missing a seven-footer with :05 left, but Nate Williams dive for the rebound fell short and he was called for a foul as time ran out.

Smith led Golden State with 22 points while Barry, giving much of his attention to McAddo, tallied 19.

Kingsburg drops spring sports

FRESNO — Kingsburg High School trustees have eliminated spring sports this year because of a lack of funds.

Deleting the spring program will save $13,500 for the southern Fresno County district.

Another $10,000 was trimmed Monday from the school's academic program, but officials said that mainly involves instructional materials already available.

The reductions follow rejection of a ballot measure last November that would have provided the district an additional $200,000 a year.

Voters will decide on a similar measure March 7. However, passage probably would not help revive this spring's deleted sports — baseball, track, swimming, tennis and golf.

Principal Don Witzanski said any funds from that tax increase would not be available until fall. However, he added that if it is defeated, the fall and winter sports program also might be eliminated.

Glads travel to DeAnza

CUPERTINO — Chabot College hopes to jump right back into the thick of the Golden Gate Conference basketball race with a victory over host DeAnza College here tonight.

Game time is 7:30 p.m.

The Gladiators are coming off a thrilling 65-64 win over Canada College last Friday. Steve Fraga led the winners with 14 points as Chabot had three players scoring in double figures.

Six-foot-six sophomore Brian Keith and center Willie Hardeman are also potent scorers for the Gladiators. Keith is averaging about 18 points per game and is one of the leading rebounders in the state junior college ranks.

Phil Ybarra is also a fine shooter and playmaker for Chabot.

Oakland's happy ...but who else?

Charlie Finley emerges from meeting yesterday

OAKLAND — For one more year at least, the A's will stay in Oakland, a situation that makes Oakland happy, Denver and San Francisco unhappy and Charlie Finley, Bob Lurie and Bowie Kuhn upset.

Finley's $12 million sale of his team went down the drain Monday when Denver millionaire Marvin Davis backed out of the deal.

"Davis was extremely fair with me," said Finley, who had been warned for a week or more that Davis was ready to cancel his agreement ifFinley was unable to deliver the team because of the lawsuit filed against him by the Coliseum.

Now, Finley says he had worked out a deal with the Coliseum and the culprit preventing an A's move was San Francisco Mayor George Moscone.

"Oakland people have been very cooperative with me," said Finley. "I can't say the same about San Francisco. It's just too damn bad Mayor Moscone and San Francisco aren't more aware of their problem. It's very possible now that the Giants will get out and San Francisco will wind up with nothing.

"If they want to play that way out there, well, so can I. The end result is that somebody is going to be a loser in the Bay Area, and I don't intend it to be me."

Finley wasn't quite as feisty Monday after the announcement by Davis. "I'll have to stay in Oakland. It's the only thing I can do," he commented and even mentioned the possibility he could go bankrupt.

"Nobody from the league is knocking on my door to help me out," said Finley. "No one wants to buy a club in Oakland. Why should they want to buy a license to lose money?"

"I don't know if a split schedule would have worked out, but I certainly would have been willing to try," said San Francisco co-owner Bob Lurie, whose partner Bud Herseth has been trying to sell his share of the Giants because of the situation in the Bay Area.

Lurie disagreed with Finley's fingering Moscone as the villian of the piece. "It's not fair to put that pressure on Moscone. Oakland made a very strong stand to begin with (the $35 million suit against Finley that said the Coliseum would not negotiate and that the A's would be expected to stay there the remaining 10 years of their contract)."

A meeting last Thursday between Moscone, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, Finley and Lurie saw Moscone offered a plan that would have had the Giants playing half their games at Candlestick and the other half at the Coliseum.

Moscone turned it down and also rejected the same plan when presented to him Monday by Oakland Mayor Lionel Wilson, Robert Nahas, Coliseum Inc. president, and Charles Santana, president of the Alameda County Supervisors.

"The A's are here to stay," said a happy Nahas yesterday. "We're out moving bleachers out of the way of the football field to form the baseball field right now."

Nahas explained that "money is one of the smallest items" in the Coliseum's fight to keep the A's.

The A's annual rental of $125,000 is the smallest part of the money that the Coliseum gains from their residence. Parking and concession revenues amount to $275-375,000 per year. In addition, more than 500 part-time jobs are involved plus additional business for the East Bay.

"I've talked to Finley," said Nahas, "and told him we'll help finance additional promotional activites to help attract fans."

The A's drew only 495,578 fans last year, and attendance could dip even lower this year because although the A's will be in Oakland in 1978, will they be there in 1979?

Marvin Davis has set his sites on a major league baseball team in Denver for 1979. "I thought when we made the deal, it would be concluded in three or four days," said Davis.

"Time simply ran out this year. We'll get a team. We're starting right away to try to get a team for Denver in 1979."

Moscone, who helped save the Giants for San Francisco, knows the two team situation is proving disasterous. "I think anything that would keep two teams here is bad for baseball. The American League made a serious mistake when it allowed the A's to move to Oakland."

And the mayor's office says he is still receptive to "any creative proposal" involving the Giants playing some of their games in Oakland but not to the Giants playing half their games in Oakland and changing their name.

Davis now has a year to get a team. Finley now has a year to work on some kind of agreement with the Coliseum. Oakland now has a year to work on a "creative proposal" to guarantee some baseball being played in the Coliseum. And baseball now has another year to suffer its Bay Area problem.

There is no joy in Frisco

OAKLAND — There was little joy in San Francisco and Denver yesterday after Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley struck out in his bid to sell the once mighty club to oilman Marvin Davis.

Davis withdrew Monday a $12 million offer to purchase the A's and move them to Denver. He said he balked because of a lawsuit by the Oakland Coliseum to keep Finley from bowing out of a 10-year lease.

A disappointed Finley said he would be forced to keep the A's in Oakland — at least for now.

In San Francisco, Mayor George Moscone and Giants President Robert Lurie glumly predicted the baseball bombshell meant the battle for fickle Bay area baseball fans would drag on.

Both San Francisco and Oakland have suffered lagging attendance since Finley moved his team out from Kansas City prior to the 1968 season. Finley conceded Monday the area is too small for two teams.

"Two teams can't survive," Finley said in a telephone interview from his Chicago home. "It might end up that there'll be no baseball at all in Oakland.

"I'll have to stay in Oakland," the ailing owner said, adding that spring training preparations would begin on schedule. But Finley said he could end up in "bankruptcy."

The A's drew a measley 495,578 fans last season, worst in the major leagues. The Giants drew 700,056, the worst in the National League.

San Francisco Mayor George Moscone said the American League made a "serious mistake" when the American League permitted Finley to move the A's to Oakland.

"I think anything that would keep two teams here is bad for San Francisco Bay area baseball." he said Monday after learning of Davis's decision.

Said Lurie: "I was hopeful that the A's would leave and we'd be playing some of the games in Oakland. But now we won't."

A member of Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm's staff said his boss "felt it was a great disappointment. He felt Denver could well support a baseball team." Denver is the home of Broncomania.

Davis announced his decision through his attorney and was not available to discuss the statement.

Earlier in the day, he said it looked like his plans had failed because of the lawsuit filed by the Coliseum on Dec. 14, immediately after the Denver millionaire announced his desire to buy the A's.

Davis had indicated he planned to have the A's play in Mile High Stadium, where all 75,000 seats were soldout for the National Football League Denver Broncos. The American Association champion Denver Bears drew 195,000 fans last season at the stadium, which seats 55,000 for baseball.

The Coliseum filed suit to block the sale because of the 10-year lease Finley signed with the ballpark when he moved the A's to Oakland from Kansas City.

Davis said he was "deeply disappointed" with the stalling development. He had given Finley and Oakland officials until Monday to resolve their differences.

"I thought when we made the deal it would be concluded in three or four days," he said Monday morning, before his decision to end the deal was announced. "But it turned into a long and bitter fight."

A's players set for tiny crowds

OAKLAND — The Oakland A's apparently will be playing baseball in the same spot next season and outfielder Mitchell Page says, "We know what to expect — 5,000 people."

"So we'll play for 5,000 people. Maybe the people in Oakland will feel a little different since they came so close to losing their ball club," he added.

Denver oilman Marvin Davis, who wanted to buy the A's from Charles O. Finley and move the American League team, withdrew his offer Monday.

"It would have been nice to go to Denver," said outfielder Bill North. "But I'll play my game wherever I am even if it's in Oakland."

North, the starting center fielder for the A's since 1973, was benched late last season on orders from Finley after criticizing the owner.

Finley said then he'd try to trade North, and the outfielder says now that he plans to play out his option and become a free agent next year.

"It's kind of a messy situation, isn't it?" North said of his relationship with Finley and the owners' relationship to Oakland.

The A's averaged little more than 5,000 fans per game last season, and shortstop Rob Picciolo said that if Oakland wants to keep the team "then I think the people should come out and prove it."

But the team which finished last in the Western Division may be losing its top pitcher, Vida Blue, to the Cincinnati Reds any day now.

"I think we are going to struggle as a team for a few more years," said Page.

Pitcher Bob Lacey said he was glad to hear the A's won't be moving to Denver. One reason is that he's an Oakland Raiders football fan.

"It would have been really tough to go there and try to be a Denver Bronco fan," he said.

Rapids aid Bob, buddy

Bob O'Donnel and fishing buddy Ron Hill went out to the "Big Break" area for catfish Saturday morning. They discovered that the dam had been removed and water was coming through at a good cli (rather cloudy water, too).

It made for good fishing conditions and they came back with four big catfish, each weighing about four pounds. "They were pretty scrappy," says Ron. "And the fillets were so large we had to slice through the sides again so they'd fit into the skillet!"

Bob and Ron predict that catfishing will continue to be excellent for some time to come.

Bob Keller reports he was hunting with a friend in the Sutter By-pass area over the weekend. Suddenly, Bob Says to his buddy, "Hey, a goose!" The friend jerks up his shotgun and showers down on the goose. Nothing happens and Bob said, "How come you missed?" So the friend lets loose another round.

"Oh, oh! You missed again," Bob told him. They were getting closer and closer and the goose never moved or turned its head to look at them. It turns out that Bob has a new floater goose decoy! (I wonder who the friend was, and if they still go hunting together!)

There will be a Running Deer Competition at the Livermore-Pleasanton Rod and Gun Club on February 5.

Terry Ludlow, chairman of the running deer committee, announces that practice starts at 9:00 A.M. and competition will begin an hour later.

Also during the day, there will be Off Hand, Bench Rest, and Iron Chicken shoots. So bring your friends and lots of ammo. See you out there.

A short time ago this column carried some information about the new Hornady 220 Grain SP bullet for the new Remington 8mm Rem. Mag. Since then I wrote to Hornady asking for some reloading information on their new bullet. They have sent some detailed data that should interest those of you who do your own reloading.

The following are items they recommend" Cartridge, 8mm Remington Magnum; bullet, 220 grain Hornady spire point; sectional density, .301; ballistic coefficient, .448; rifle, Remington 700 BDL #362694; barrel, factory standard, 24" long; twist, one in ten; primer, Rem. #9½ magnum; case, peters; cartidge overall length, 3.600 inches.

Charlie Litz. . . . . In the bag

It's real easy to increase your loads as you get used to your rifle. (It may be easier on the shoulder, too.) Be sure to watch for pressure, too, such as sticky cases, flattened primers, case diameters, etc.

Anyway, the new 220 grain SP in the 8mm has the appearance of a superior round.

The Department of Fish and Game has announced that the annual rabbit hunt at Grizzly Island in the Suisun Marsh, usually scheduled in January, has been postponed until fall.

The DFG said the hunt would be held during the pheasant season in the fall, permitting hunters to bag both rabbits and pheasants on certian days. Further information will be published prior to the fall hunting season.

Juniors shine

Two Clayton Valley Bowl juniors turned in fine performances in the Junior Pro-Am, conducted in conjunction with the $90,000 Ford Open at Mel's Bowl in Alameda the weekend of Jan. 14.

Eleven-year-old Trishia Foster rolled three games, each time scoring well over her 110 average. In her first game, bowling with pro Dale Green, Trishia bowled a 194. She shot a 172 in her second game with Danny Campbell, and finished up with a 189 with Tom Wright.

Trishia's total of 555, along with a handicap of 270 and the pros' total, gave her team a 1485 to take first place in the prep division.

Local fters star

Led by Tom Olsen and Debbie Alviso, seven Livermore shooters will compete in the Knights of Columbus Northern California Regional free throw championships next month in San Leandro.

Olsen, 12, hit 23 of 25 from the line as Alviso, led the girls with 18 of 25.

Other local winners to compete at San Leandro for a spot in the state finals at Fresno are Mike Braun, 11, Livermore, Allison Norell, 11, Livermore, Tracy Basinger, 12, Pleasanton, Tom Braun, 13, Livermore, Debbie Disrow, 13, Livermore, Brian Potelletti, 14, Livermore.

United blanked in finals

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Chuck Ogren and Chris Poulos did all they could in goal, but their team mates were shut out and Ballistic United fell, 1-0, in the finals of the under-12 division of the Nevada Silver State Invitational Tournament to the Fremont Cosmos.

Brian Warman, Steve Maciorski, Marty Farris, David Morris all played an outstanding game on defense as the Cosmos won the first time in what is becoming a classic series.

Kevin Mayn scored twice, Brandon Baxter once and Mike Duesterhaus once as United started the tourney with a 4-0 loss to the Las Vegas Soartans.

Maciorski and Gary Daniels had assists while Mike Sellar played well.

Duesterhaus scored thrice, Mayn twice, Baxter twice and Daniels once as United ripped the Phoenix Ravens, 8-0. Nicky Pearson and Paul Shuey did well.

They reached the finals by beating the Las Vegas Trojans, 6-1, thanks to Gary Daniels goal and assist, Brandon Baxter's two assists, Kevin Mayn's two goals, Mike Duesterhaus assist and David Morris goal.

Lennie McMillin, David Irish and Shawn Salazar were other standouts.

In the same division, the Ballistic Nationals beat the Phoenix Firebirds, 3-0, on two goals by Kevin Henry, one by Mitch Wilkinson and an assist by Nicky Martinsen.

Greg Bazan, Eric Van Etten and Steve Woodfill played well.

In the next game, the Nationals lost to the Concord Wolverines, 2-0, as Clark Morris, Darrell Packard and Tim Silva played well anyway. Paul Romero played well in goal.

Bumped from title contention, the Nationals drubbed the Utah Pioneer Spitfires, 7-0, as Rusty Witt scored two, Greg Bazan, Tony Luppino, Rocky Maratsos, Martinsen and Mitch Wilkinson one each on assists from Luppino, Maratsos, Potts, Wilkinson and Woodfill.

The Nationals were placed sixth of the 20 teams in the tourney.

Archer stars in loss

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Andrea Archer scored twice, once from 40 yards, but the Pleasanton Kicks fell, 4-3, in the finals of the Silver State Soccer Invitational over the weekend.

Karalyn Lang had the other goal as the game went to overtime and a "shootout" before the San Jose Cougars won the contest.

Teresa Estes and Cheryl Rose had each scored twice, and Andrea Preciado and Archer once each to give the Kicks a 7-0 win over the Las Vegas Super Tigers.

Robin Vranesh had an assist in that game while Betsy Williams, Jessica Lach and Kathy Lawson each played well.

Estes, Vranesh and Robin Getty scored to lift the Kicks to a 3-0 win over the Phoenix Rookies. Denise Scaggs' Adrienne Droogas and Frances Geasa all played well.

Lang and Estes had the goals while Scaggs, Melissa Maready and Lisa Roberts played well in a 2-1 win over the Cougars in an earlier game.

Shams visit Sharks

LONG BEACH — The San Francisco Shamrocks hope to continue their hot play tonight when they tangle with host Long Beach in a Pacific Hockey League contest here tonight.

The Shamrocks, not counting last night's late game against Phoenix, are 5-3-1 on the season.

San Francisco defeated San Diego 5-2 Friday night by scoring three times in the last period. Player-coach Wayne Rivers recorded a hat-trick.

Intel trips Trucks

Intel took a tight 38-36 victory over Me & Bob Trucking in Tri-Valley Basketball League play last weekend.

Rich Stewart and Russ Haley each meshed 14 points to spark the winners. Terry Durkin had 12 for Me & Bob Trucking.

In another contest Harris Realty posted a 37-27 victory over Galaxy. Andrew Wyrobek had 10 points for the losers. Mike Gibbons led Harris Realty with eight points and Charley Sebarhar added seven markers.

Earlier, the Bank of America edged Deab's Restraunt, 56-54, as Bob Fjosuord scored 22 points and Gary Ingelbretson and Jerry Robinson each contributed eight points.

Former EBAL scoring champion Steve Sperber added 18 for the losers.

Tri-Valley Kirby defeated Swensen's, 54-51, as Steve Mills tallied 13 points and Jim Turner chunked in 12. Chris DePrater led the losers with 11 while John Sevo and Erwin Mueller, the ex-NBA player, tallied nine per.

Ideal Drayage squeaked past Carpets 'N' Colors, 41-39, as Steve Flarity canned 10 for the winners and Jerry Tassielli, the former Martinez Muir, and Mark Barbano added nine and eight, respectively.

Jim Klescewski scored 13 for the losers.

Sunkist Pools beat Can-Am Plumbing as Troy Roberson and Art Hill split 28 of the winners, 51-40 edge, right down the pipe. Carl Shellen's 12 paced the defeated Plumbers.

Galaxy Records shot TAC Enterprises with a dose of Darryl Dawkins' "Intergalatic Funksmanship" to win 51-34 behind 14 points each by Jon Stebbins and Martin Pane. Dave Wiltgen had 12 for the losers.

Missions pick up four

SAN JOSE —The San Jose Missions of the Pacific Coast League have been sent four players by their parent club, the Seattle Mariners, that American League club announced yesterday.

Seattle purchased the contracts of right-handed pitcher Roy Branch from Kansas City, infielder Marvin Webb from Los Angeles and outfielder-first baseman Denny Fitzgerald from Philadelphia. The parent club also signed free agent infielder Manny Estrada.

Mel Didier, the Mariners' scouting director, also announced that outfielder Tommy Smith has been given his outright release from the San Jose roster. Smith appeared in 21 games with the Mariners last season and hit .259.

Branch, 24, is a former firstround draft selection of the Royals and posted a 2-5 record and 4.88 ERA in 1977 at Jacksonville in the Southern League.

Webb, 25, is a right-handed hitter who compiled a .292 average with eight homers and 56 RBI in 112 games at San Antonio of the Texas League last season.

Fitzgerald, 26, also bats right-handed. He posted a .219 averge in 76 games with Oklahoma City in the American Association last season.

Estrada, 25, hit .273 in 51 games at Hawaii in the PCL and .231 in eight games with Iowa of the American Association in 1977.

Vike, LMC nines collide

Baseball in January. Seems hard to believe, but Diablo Valley College will get its baseball season underway this Saturday when it entertains Los Medanos in a scrimmage on the DVC campus. The time of the scrimmage hasn't been announced.

The defending state champion Vikings, who started practice this week, play their first game for keeps on Feb. 10 against Hartnell in a non-conference clash on the Pleasant Hill campus. That contest begins at noon.

DVC lost just five from last year's club, but they included pitchers Eric Snider and Bob Flynn, who combined for all but two of the Vikings' 27 victories.

Flynn now pitches for Oregon State and Snider is plying his trade at Washington State.

"Our biggest problem will be replacing Snider and Flynn," commented DVC baseball coach Ernie Cecaci. "Our pitching will determine our success."

What's happenin'?

LL sign-ups continue

The Dublin Little League will hold signups starting today from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturday Jan. 28 from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at th Dublin High School cafeteria.

Those interested in playing in the training, minor or major program must have a birthday between Aug. 1, 1965 and July 31, 1970. To be eligible for the senior division the birthdate must be between Aug. 1 1962, and July 31, 1965. All returning Little Leaguers must signup again.

Every player must be accompanied by a parent or legel guardian. A copy of a birth certificate is required for all new players.

A donation of $20 for the first player with a $25 maximun for each family is requested. For more information call 829-3460 or 829-2887.

BOWL LEAGUES

The new spring league will get underway at the Granada Bowl in Livermore in a few weeks. WE SPENT A LOT OF TIME MAKING DECADE.

NOW YOU CAN SAVE A LITTLE MONEY BUYING IT.

Now you can enjoy the taste that took ten years to make at a price you haven't enjoyed for years.

If it's your first pack of Decade, chances are it won't be your last.

Because Decade is the first low 'tar' cigarette in which all the parts are arranged in perfect balance with the others. The tobacco, the filter and even the paper.

It's this "Total System" that allows us to hold down 'tar' to 5mg. without holding back on taste.

Of course, if you're already a Decade smoker, you probably know all that. So you're probably already clipping the coupon.

DECADE. Only 5 mg. 'tar.'
